June 3, 1939

Dear Mrs. Buckbee:

Thank you for that fine letter you wrote me on May 14th. It would have had an earlier reply but that I have been away from New York for some little time, only just getting back to looking over my accumulated mail.

I was touched by your kindness in writing me about "All in the Day's Work." I am glad that you liked it, glad particularly that you agree with me about Woodrow Wilson.

I am interested in your interest in Anna Ella Carroll. There is a story there and a fine one. Thirty years ago I contributed to the American Magazine a series of articles on The American Woman carrying it from Revolutionary War days up and including the Civil War. In the course of one of these articles I had something to say about Miss Carroll, very incomplete but accurate as far as it goes, I think. I am having it copied for you as I have no extra print. If it helps you in your investigation of Miss Carroll's life I shall be glad.

Thanking you again for your letter, believe me

Very sincerely yours
