Dear V. R.:

I came in from the country last night - the first time I have been up since Christmas - and found your special delivery letter with the suggestions on the Preface. How you do help it. It is quite magical the way you bring a thing out.

I think I shall be back in a few days to seek more help. I am trying to get a final chapter modifying, a chapter which will embody certain reservations which I have detected in all of this chorus of approval of O.D.Y. As near as I can make out they come down to this - that he has the defects of his qualities and I am honestly trying to get this shading in in a final chapter. I shall be much interested to see if you think it adds anything to the book.

I am so sorry you have had a bad ten days and of all things black days and nights. Maybe when I get this last piece done Sara and I will run down with it.

Much love to you
