Characteristics Mrs. Ida B. Young S.M.C.
Feb. 18, 1926

"Who does Mr. Young look lik2? His father?"

"No. My husband looked more like C.J. He had the same actions as C.J. When I see C.J. jump out of a car, I notice it. He was methodical, orderly. That was like my husband.

(Mrs. O.D.Y.) "I have always thought Owen looked like you."
(Mrs. I.B.Y.) "Yes, he looks more like my father, but I was the only child who looked like my father." In appearance and manner he is like him. The way he talks is like his own father. He never talked until he had something to say, and then said it very carefully.

His grandfather, Peter Young, was the kind of man who thought he owned the world. When he was around, everybody had to be quiet. I can remember Owen as a little boy coming out in the kitchen looking rather funny. I asked him, 'Now, what's up?' 'Oh, well,' he replied, 'grandfather's got a streak.' I never could get any criticism out of him, of anybody except some remark like that. Probably what had happened was that he was making some noise, and his grandfather, who was trying to read, told him to stop, in his harsh way, so Owen cleared right out, but you couldn't get him to say anything against anybody. He is like his father in that respect.

(Mrs.O.D.Y.) "Don't you think Owen is growing more and more like his father in that respect? Nobody knows when he is through with a person. He just drops them. They never can come back. But he never makes any comment."
(Mrs.I.B.Y.) "Yes, I think he is."
