"In one case, closely contested, he had proved an account for a client whom the opposing counsel speedily exposed as an unmitigated rascal, even to the production of a receipt for all the indebtedness Lincoln had claimed as being due.

"Lincoln quietly vanished from the court room. The judge, before giving his decision, sent for him to appear, as counsel for his client.

"'Tell the court,' said Lincoln, when the messenger found him at the neighboring hotel, 'that I can't come over. That case has left my hands so dirty that I must stay here to clean them.'"
