Dearest Alice:

I cannot think of you and Cale but when I do I see you on a raft in a swirling flood. The Louisville situation is so ghastly that when one can do nothing to help one does not dare picture it. Of course I do not know that St. James Court is in the flooded district. I ought to, but I do not. I would try to get you by 'phone but they tell me it is foolish.

This is only an arrow into the air. It may never reach you, but which if it does will tell you how deeply anxious I am for you and Cale and the Martins. Nobody else in Louisville seems to count.

Devotedly yours

Mrs. Cale Young Rice
