KALDRON
1967

allegheny college

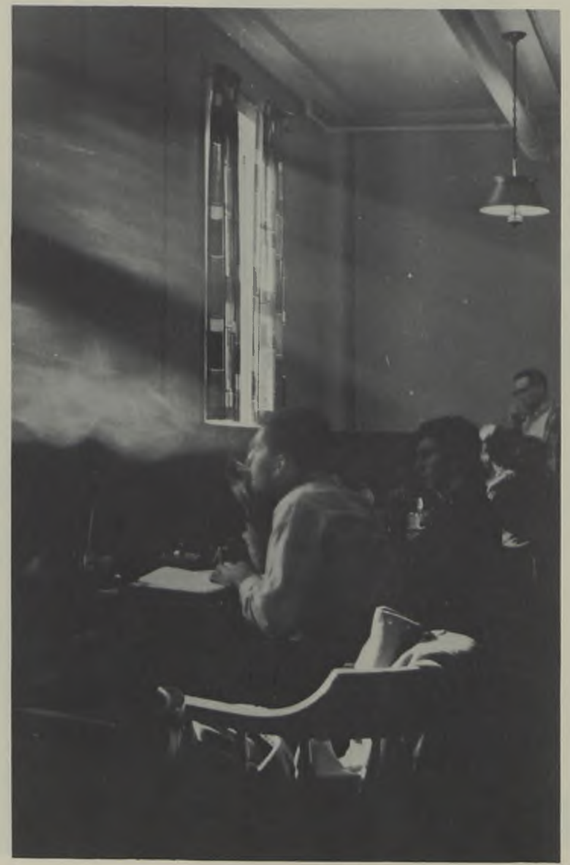
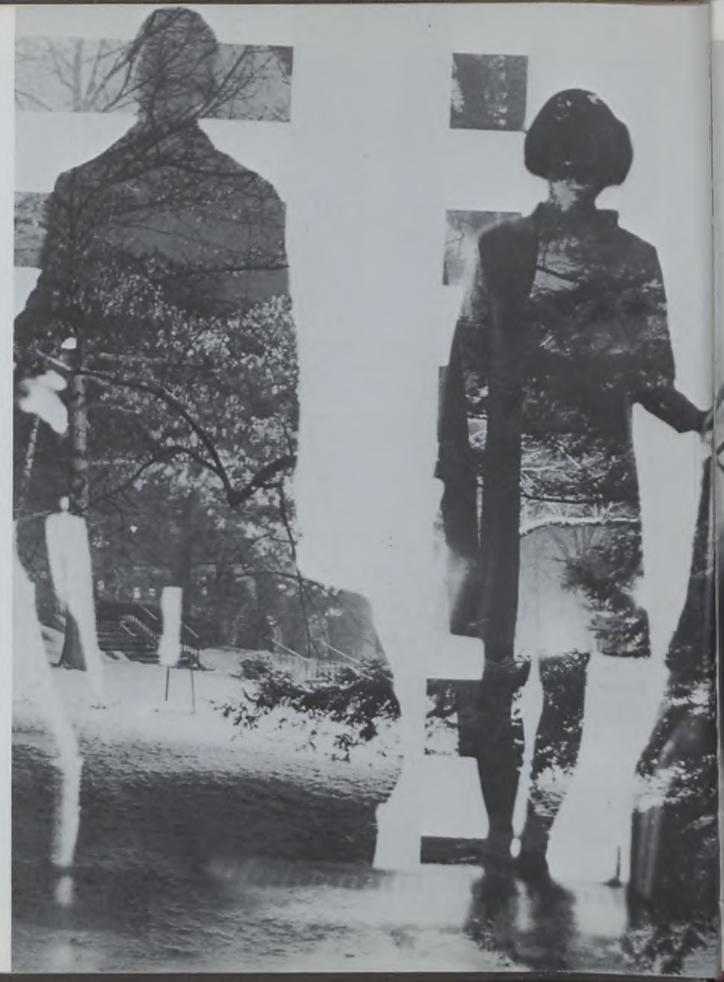
Sensitive and perceptive, Dr. Guy Buckingham transcends the ideas of any generation to understand the people of each. He represents a challenge to those who would take their education lightly, for he trusts students and relies upon their curiosity. He refuses to package information, but he thinks and discusses with students. He doesn't spoon-feed facts, but he is willing to track down ideas. The Kaldron dedicates these impressions of 1967 to this kind of educator.

Miss Mildred Ludwig is patience and solicitude to students of German, Russian, and French. To the whole college she is more—a gentle, warm person, a steadfast friend to foreign students, a well-traveled lady who readily shares her experiences and understandings. Her hospitality has often brought students and townspeople together for an evening of discussion. The Kaldron dedicates these impressions of 1967 to openness of mind, youthfulness that endures, and idealism that is not passive.

come alive!



For each person here, there is the beginning—the beginning made possible by the foundations that were present before the student arrived, the foundations that will remain after he has left. Often ignored, often unappreciated, they are the basis for the life one leads while here. Their purposes are varied. For those with questions, there are answers; for those who need direction, there is guidance. The resources which one may seek are found here —the education, the opportunity, the friendship, the goal. Against the flow of new students and accomplishments, the foundations remain the stable factor that made these possible.



ORIENTATION WEEK

orient—to set right by adjusting to facts or principles; to put into correct position or relation; to acquaint with the existing situation

Orientation week is full of impressions and facts that have not as yet taken on meaning. Not knowing where Lord's Gates are located means hunting for them and with luck, finding them between Reis Library and unfamiliar Ruter Hall. Not finding them means a trial in the daily sophomore courts. C w e n s helped; counselors w e r e understanding. Registration was grueling, and language tests were long, but out of the way at least. And it rained.

But orientation to a college takes more than a week. A freshman must adjust to the first snowfall, find the uses of the cafeteria tray and wear boots he earlier scorned. He finds a position in the school and learns he can do some things he couldn't before. And gradually the scene takes on meaning and the buildings become familiar and he has discovered something about himself.

CWENS

Cwens is an honorary sophomore service organization. At Allegheny, a majority of their services revolve around the freshman women. Cwens not only serve as big sisters to orientate the new students to the college, but also serenade South Hall and hold a Halloween party. The group also serves the college in general, by holding a dance second term, by compiling the address books, and by serving at various functions. This year, at the National Cwen Convention, the Allegheny chapter received a cup for being the most outstanding group in the nation. The cup honored all Cwens at this school in the classes of '67, '68, and '69, and represented worthy contributions to both Allegheny College and the national organization.

RESIDENT ADVISOR BOARD

In its second year of existence, the Residence Advisor Board strives to put all residents of Allegheny College under one body of control. The members as individuals serve both as liaisons between the dorm sections and the board, and as regulators of the living in these sections. The members also comprise the Resident Advisor Court, which tries infractions of dorm rules. The group meets bi-monthly to discuss events and reach solutions to problems concerning the student body. Selected by votes of the students, the board is both an initiator and enforcer of the college dormitory rules.

Learning experiences are not entirely found in books; there must be a broadening of the personality as well as of the mind. The openings are here for one to use to his advantage; the people are here for one to meet and discover. The many social groups, the informal gatherings at the grill—all these may help a person to find himself through others. Within our college lie the tools which once can use to mold many friendships. It is the person who applies himself not only scholastically but also socially who sometimes gains the greatest rewards from his education.

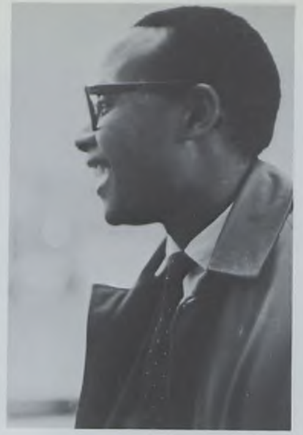
COLLEGE UNION

Allegheny's College Union provides a place of recreation and congregation for all Alleghenians. The C.U. is the headquarters for such campus organizations as the Allegheny Student Government, the Allegheny Outing Club, and the Traffic Committee. It not only houses the Bookstore and WARC, the campus radio station, but also provides various facilities for relaxation and amusement. Almost any time it is possible to find students at the grill taking a break, enjoying the company of fellow students, and just being sociable. There are also many C. U. sponsored sports activities. Skis, toboggans, and bicycles are available. For those who enjoy less vigorous exercise, the pool and ping pong tables provide the opportunity. Not only does the C.U. offer all of these activities as part of its regular schedule for each term, but it also shows films and sponsors dances and coffee houses throughout the year. It is not difficult to see how this student operated concern is such a part of the social life at Allegheny.

Julius Mbaluli spent four years at Allegheny and graduated in December, 1966. He has returned to his native country, Kenya, to teach school.



Andy Evriviades from Cyprus is a junior math major. A guest of the Delt house this year, he enjoys running track and playing the harmonica.

David Karanja, who comes to Allegheny from Kenya, is a senior majoring in economics. He hopes to work with the Ministry of Economic and Cultural affairs in his own country in the future.

Alfredo (Freddie) Moscoso is a senior Theta Chi who hails from Bolivia. Here at Allegheny, he majors in math and pursues his interest in photography.

Hans-Ulrich S c h i w e k studied French and English in his own land and is continuing these studies here. Presently an assistant in the German department, he hopes someday to be a professor.

George Jovaneh, whose home is in Israel, is living at the Crow house this year. He is a junior majoring in math.

FOREIGN STUDENT COMMITTEE

The Foreign Student Committee, under the direction of the Allegheny Student Government, is composed of members who acquaint foreign students with the campus, students, and activities. Cultural affair trips are planned to Niagara Falls, the Karamu House in Cleveland and Pittsburgh to promote better relations among the students and expose them to the area. The committee raises money for student scholarships each year by selling UNICEF cards at Christmas and providing work days in the fall and spring which allow the students to better acquaint themselves with members of the faculty. The organization provides homes at which the students reside during vacations and plans International Weekend which highlights the presence of foreign students on campus.

INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL

The Inter-Fraternity Council, a committee comprising fraternity presidents and a represenative from each fraternity, organizes the general fraternity system. IFC rules govern rush week and IFC is the impartial body that answers questions raised by freshmen. Intramural activities for upperclassmen were held under the auspices of IFC. Greek Week and other all-college functions were handled by its members. Jon Swanson, serving as president, lent his organizational abilities to the council and assured the success of the 1966-67 fraternity year.

THETA CHI

Allegheny's seven Greek Brotherhoods, which compete amongst themselves through the Interfraternity Council and interact with the campus through necessity, constitute the major part of the college's non-academic activity. Football teams running plays from the quarterback's notebook, freshman women's teas calling for instant sobriety and impressive manners, fraternity rush teaching formal small talk and quick but accurate judgment, are only the openers of a functional and entertaining year. The fraternities initiate the second term with formal rush, coat and tie affairs with evening meals and paid performers, and the traditional run-out of new pledges into the fists of their big brothers. Parties, of varying sorts, are held in honor of pledges who are as yet unaware of the hours of torment that will begin the following morning. With fifteen to twenty new members, song leaders make ready their choirs for the annual Greek sing held in Brooks dining hall. Women from each fraternity and sorority are elected to compete for the Greek Goddess title and the winner is crowned at the Greek dance which ends the week-end.

Freshman men are exposed to the fraternity way of life during the round robins first term and also through rush week the beginning of second term. Dinners and parties at the fraternity houses give upperclassmen as well as freshmen the chance to get to know each other. Rush week is climaxed by the issuing of bids on Monday morning and the traditional "running out" in Brooks Circle. Pledging normally occurs within the next few days, and the new pledges are on their way to becoming full-fledged brothers of their respective fraternities.

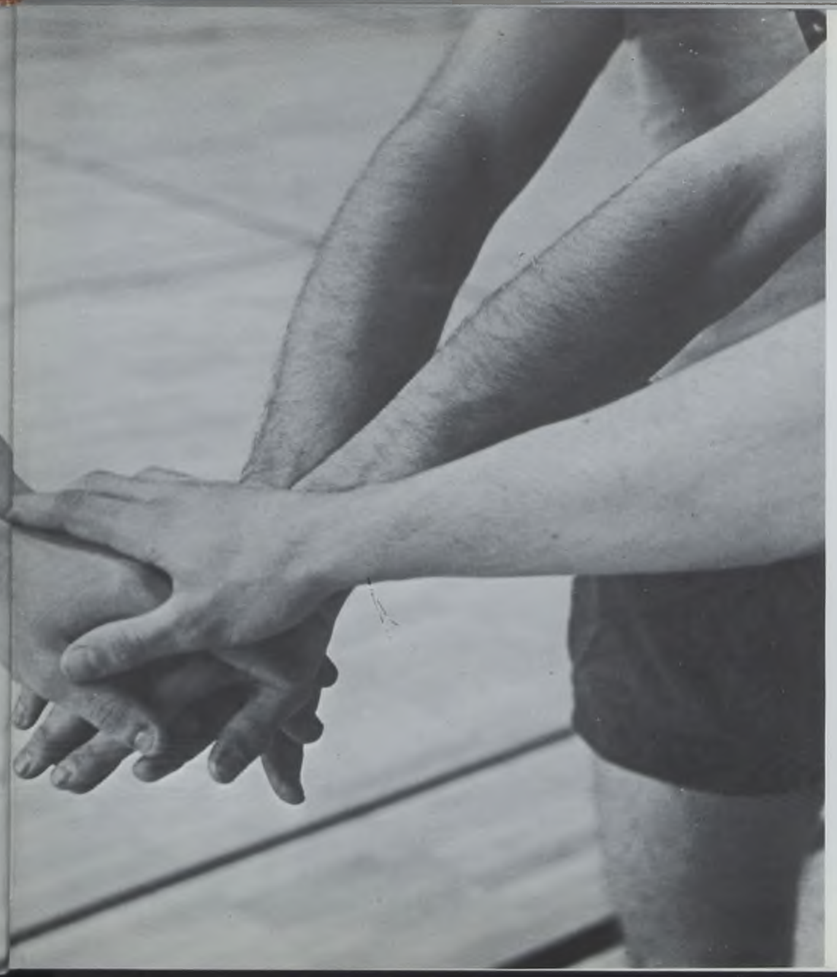
INDEPENDENTS

An independent is difficult to define except in a negative way. An Independent is not a member of a fraternity or sorority. Independents however, can or cannot be involved in the activities of the Independent Organization. He may spend his time studying, acting, or grill rating. Independents are undefinable entities, with no common characteristics. They can be looked at only as individuals.

Unifying the Independents was one of the objectives of the Independent Organization in 1966-1967. During the first term a mixer was held to get acquainted with the freshmen and to introduce them to the Independent system. Another major project for the year has been work to establish Independent social organizations which would involve dividing the dorms into sections to function as social units. If this is carried through it would mean more social activities for the Independent as well as a new era of Independent Organization at Allegheny.



Why sports? Perhaps because the physical challenge is sometimes more satisfying than the mental one, or because the struggle with the concrete foe is more rewarding than the grappling with an abstract problem. Perhaps because for a small moment, each player becomes his own hero at a job well done or a game well played. Perhaps because superiority is found not only in what one learns but also in what one accomplishes. Or, the answer may lie in the fact that, in some small way, the individual "I" has become a uniting and valuable factor of the united "We."

Carolyn Anderson, Jenny Swanson, Queen Judy Thomas, Dana Williams, Debbie Wood.

Homecoming Weekend overflowed with activities. The week swung under way with the Playhouse production of "Mary, Mary" starring David Downs and Willa Nemetz. The play ran from Wednesday through Sunday. Friday's festivities included an IFC all-college dance at the Delta Tau Delta and Alpha Chi Rho fraternity houses and the bonfire pep rally which convened in the Delt parking lot at 10:15. At this time, Judy Thomas was named Homecoming Queen. Of course, throughout the week, fraternities, sororities and the independents labored diligently to complete their float entries in the annual Homecoming Parade which passed through Brooks Circle to be judged before continuing to Robertson Field. This year's float theme was centered around comic strip characters. As announced during half time, the Kappa's and S.A.E.'s had the winning floats with their respective themes, Grog of "BC" and Beetle Bailey. Included in the half time entertainment was a performance by the Saegertown High School Band and the coronation of the queen. The football game provided the audience with many thrills as Allegheny soared ahead of the Bethany Bisons during the first half with a score of 19-0. However, the fate of the Gators took a reversal after half time and the final score was a close 21-19 in favor of the Bisons. Following the game, the Angels and Block A served cider on the CU lawn to alums, students, and guests. Most of the fraternities welcomed back their alumni with a dinner that evening. The weekend came to a grand finale with the semi-formal Homecoming Dance held Saturday night in the field house. Balloons galore and comic strip character posters added to the atmosphere as of course did Queen Judy Thomas, and her court: Dana Williams, Jenny Swanson, Carolyn Anderson and Debbie Wood.

WAA

Officers: West, Snyder, Spitzform, Woolridge.

WAA coordinates intercollegiate and intramural sports for Allegheny women. This year one hundred and fifty enthusiastic volleyball players signed their names to lists on their bathroom doors, enabling them to become members of one of the six teams that battled on Tuesday afternoons and Wednesday evenings. An All-star team also met Slippery Rock in what proved to be an exciting if disappointing afternoon. Although Slippery Rock was victorious twice, Allegheny's lone victory was enthusiastically cheered by the players on the bench and the not impartial referee. The regular intramural season was highlighted by a struggle between the Claggins and the Zoondas for the number one position in the girls intramural volleyball line-up. As time approached for the final game, injuries plagued the Claggins, and tests and papers could no longer be escaped by either team. Attendance lagged and the contest remained unresolved—no one won, no one lost, and hardly anyone found time to play the game.

WAA also planned basketball, tennis and second term trips to the YWCA for gymnastics.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

There may seem to be no diversity, no stimulation, no challenge. But this community is a representation of places in which one may some day work or live. The number of people and buildings is small, but the myriad of experiences can be found if one learns to look beyond himself. The goal of this education is learning not only of ourselves as individuals, but of our places in the society in which we live. We are not entirely introspective; the school aims away from itself and toward the nation with which it is involved.

David Frost
Sally Seanor

The question: whether "good standing" or merely "good academic standing" should be a requirement for participation in the pass-fail experiment.

The result: a lively discussion at the ASG meeting called to order November 6, 1966.

Jon Foster
Nena Boax

Bruce Breeman

Dan Barco

Jack Lewis . . . "All those confused?"

During a discussion of pass-fail grading, ASG president Jerry Feist asks Norm Levine to assume the presidents chair so that Jerry may discuss the motion.

Is it true that if a fraternity is on social probation that the individual members are on social probation?

Yes, that is correct.

Then I think this is an unfair handicap to some students. Perhaps some members of the fraternity would not be responsible for the fraternity being on social probation but would be penalized.

I don't feel that if I attend a house function, a keg party or whatever else we have, that they should restrict academic endeavors by applying it to academic standing. There are so many ways you can be put on "not good standing."

This comes under Point 1: All juniors and seniors in good standing. If there is no objections it will be changed to —All juniors and seniors in good academic standing.

I object

Is there another person who objects? This must pass by a majority. If a majority of the people vote to keep this out, it is out . . . otherwise it is in.

May I please say something about my objection?

This is not debatable.

Oh gee

All those in favor of the objection, in other words to have it considered, signify by raising your right hand. All those who object to it being stated in Point 1 that it be only juniors and seniors in good academic standing, signify by raising your right hand . . . one, two, three, four, five. All those who are not unopposed to the objections signify by raising your right hand.

All those confused?

Due to the confusion the objection has been defeated.

All facets of the student's life—educational, cultural, social—are the concern of ASG. In 1966-67 the Student Government attempted to make the Allegheny Community a better place through each of these areas. It presented the idea of a pass-fail grading system to the president and faculty council; it planned a symposium entitled "The Ivory Tower of the College Environment" involving Dr. Harold Taylor and Fred M. Heckinger of the New York Times; and it helped the social side by having more dances and bringing such groups as Simon and Garfunkel to Allegheny.

THE ALLEGHENY CAMPUS

Published Since 1876

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE
MEADVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA

Jan Tolhurst, Niel Hart

This year the Campus under editorship of Don Spiecher, has been greatly revamped. It has broadened to encompass not only campus but also local and national events. Here on campus as well as giving the traditional coverage of features and current events, the newspaper has delved into such controversial issues as dorm dating and the bookstore and library problems. Branching out from the college community, the Campus has attempted to instill interest in the surrounding Meadville area as well. In becoming more diversified, it has succeeded in increasing its appeal to its readers.

The Campus is known as a newspaper. It is picked up, bent, mutilated, spindled, and thrown away. It is anticipated, criticized, praised, and discussed. It is a journalistically unconventional combination of objectivity and bias. It is an attempt to inform the student body and an attempt to create opinion with opinion. It does not wish to merely reflect the attitudes and ideas of its community, it wishes to make that community respond to other attitudes and ideas. It has met with varying degrees of success. Fifty years ago from today, if someone from the college examines the 1966-67 Campus, he will not find a record of student life at the time, but will, hopefully, find the seeds of what makes his own student life differ from ours.

ALLEGHENY—COMMUNITY EXCHANGE

Serving to maintain and further college-community relationships, the Allegheny-Community Exchange Program gives interested students the opportunity to work for and with the Meadville community. Through a series of educational and cultural programs, those students who participate have a chance to apply classroom knowledge in situations of everyday life. The exchange is co-ordinated by an executive council composed of two co-chairmen and the heads of the various projects. Many upperclassmen work under the council on the "Big-Brother, Big-Sister" program in conjunction with the Crawford County Juvenile Probation Office in Meadville. This program allows individual relationships to develop which are mutually beneficial. Other group programs include the Doman Clinic, where students help handicapped children through the use of patterned exercises; cultural events at Allegheny for the Bethesda children; organizing activities for the YMCA and various activities with the Boy Scout Troops in Meadville.

SOCIOLOGY

What do Allegheny students expect in their dating partners on a serious date? One hundred and two Allegheny students checked from a list of twenty-three qualities those which they would consider important. One hundred per cent of the women and ninety-nine per cent of the men questioned said they wanted a date who was stable and dependable. Both men and women placed almost as much emphasis in considerateness, emotional maturity, and the prospect that their dates would be good future parents. The suggestion that the institution of marriage is being threatened by a "romance complex" apparently does not hold for the Allegheny students studied. A comparison of the findings with studies done by other researchers suggests the Allegheny findings are representative of college students today.

It is much easier to say how the relationship between student and faculty should not be structured. Most significantly, it should not be that of the child-parent, nor that of therapist-patient, experimenter-subject, or drill master and recruit.

To this writer the ideal relationship could be likened to that of an experienced guide and relatively inexperienced but highly interested tourist. The function of the guide is to lead the tourist to significant experiences, to explain difficult and esoteric details, and hopefully, to influence him to want to travel further and experience more widely in the area of their mutual interest.

ANGEL FLIGHT

Angel Flight functions as a service organization to the general campus community. Angels promote better relations with the Cadet Corps at Allegheny and work in conjunction with them and Arnold Air in developing an interest in military life. Activities include weekly drill, serving as hostesses at R.O.T.C. functions, and planning the annual R.O.T.C. Ball. Angels are required to maintain certain standards and are chosen for their interest in the Air Force.

Arnold Air Society is an honorary organization of advanced R.O.T.C. cadets who wish to obtain a broader view of the Air Force and military life. Each member attends lectures and movies pertaining to national defense which will be beneficial to those cadets entering the Air Force as commissioned officers. Arnold Air performs valuable services for the college community. The R.O.T.C. Ball at Thanksgiving is sponsored by this organization.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS

The Young democrats club was organized this year as a non-partisan group to provide Allegheny students with an alternative in political discussions to the conservative Young Republicans. Their activities included working at the Democratic headquarters during the campaign for the governorship of Pennsylvania. Speakers and movies were highlights of their meetings.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS

Allegheny's Young Republicans Club is an action oriented organization whose main purpose is to help Republican candidates during elections. This year members worked at both the Citizens for Shafer and Republican headquarters in Meadville. During Homecoming they made displays and distributed publicity on Allegheny's graduate Governor Raymond Shafer. While no election is going on, the Club tries to stimulate interest in the Republican Party, our political systems and our government.

I am. My thoughts are mine; my ideas are self-created. The ideas which I have take many forms. I can express them through the colors of an oil or canvas, or through the words I write upon paper. I may dance alone to my own music, or perform before an audience. My actions are the result of what I am and what I wish to be. I may be directed, or work independently. I may use my own idea, or depend upon what someone has set before me. Whatever form I use, I am expressing my uniqueness and acknowledging my presence.

ART

Zorba's young companion pleaded, "Teach me to dance." seeing that in the act of dancing the old man proved more youthful than he. Every dance makes us want to dance, to express ourselves in the joy and release of rhythmic gesture. It is the most infectious of arts. It's the oldest of arts, yet the youngest, because every generation makes it anew. Whether we perform it or watch it, every dance seems to be a creative act, rather than a created thing.

ORCHESIS

Contrast: noumenal achievement and somatic discipline; in-group rapport and raptured audience; serious exploration and fun: Orchesis!

The choreographic challenge this year is the essences of England: 'mod' and traditional; fog; kings; dignity.

The dancers present their show in the spring, consummating a year of creative activity and synthesizing parody, drama, sultriness and classical ballet form.

Music, to me, is the language of emotions, of feeling. As such, it is a language of interest and importance to a human being equal to the language of science or of business.

I am glad that our singing does not sound very good during the early part of the year, and during the early rehearsals of a new song, because a large part of the charge is in experiencing improvement and progress. To win a battle, especially against oneself, is a great thrill. Achievement is a thrill we musicians share with strivers in every form of human endeavor.

Perfecting what they enjoy doing spontaneously, the process that the Choir effects each week as preparation for Sunday Chapel was extended to novel activities this year. In addition to hours of rehearsal, the choir began raising funds for a proposed European tour and presented a Spring Concert, a Commencement Concert, a concert with Sinfonietta, and a spring tour off campus.

One of the highlights of the fall term of 1966 was the presentation of the Play of Herod, a twelfth century liturgical drama, by the members of the Allegheny College Choir and Chorale. Both the uniqueness of the play itself, sung entirely in plainsong, and the high quality of performance typical of the College Choir spurred plans for televising the program over KDKA-TV in Pittsburgh on Christmas Eve, 1968.

The Allegheny Chorale, directed by Dr. W. S. Wright North, combines the voices of the town and the college.

CONCERT BAND

The enjoyment of good music is a primary requirement for membership in Allegheny's Concert Band. Organized only two years ago, the group strives toward quality performance in their concerts presented twice each year. Membership has been non-selective, with emphasis on experience and desire to participate rather than on perfected ability. Mr. Paul McCandless, an accomplished musician from the Meadville High School music department, has worked with the band to bring out the best in each of its individual members. With added support from the college in the form of new musical instruments, the Concert Band continues to become an invaluable asset to Allegheny's musical environment.

SPEECH / DRAMA

Birth is the Grand Entrance par excellence, and contains all the necessary elements to make you the center of attraction, which, after all, is the purpose of the Grand Entrance. These elements are Preparation (pregnancy), Anticipation (labor), and The Entrance (Birth).

More specifically, you arrive late (naturally) at a party, send your wife in ahead of you to greet the assembled multitudes, offhandedly murmuring something about you having trouble with the dogs. (Preparation). You then stand outside the door, alternately growling and screaming for a short time. (Anticipation). Then, enter quickly, covered with blood, (preferably not your own), accompanied, if possible, by a brace of bloody-fanged Doberman Pinschers. You cannot help but be noticed.

VARIETY SHOW

And now vanguard theatre finds expression here with the advent of the Student Experimental Theatre: a supervising board of directors and membership open to all creative students to direct and produce plays. Our thespian society involves the entire college community to the extent of individual interest. The enacted program of repertory plays shall broaden to include indigenous plays. Bravo to the creative brave!

STUDENT EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

WARC

From the early morning Reveille edition, to the Friday night Bunda Marathon, WARC rounded out its third successful broadcasting year. Along with the introduction of morning broadcasting, came the first series of WARC Editorials which commented on issues pertinent to the student community. Dorm dating, creativity, and the pass-fail system were subjects tackled by the staff.

The year also saw complete election coverage plus the usual coverage of sports and important campus events. Already new convertors have been installed in Caflisch and Baldwin so that WARC may be heard on AM radio. With an expanded program staff, the station plans to enlarge its scope to meet the needs of the student and surrounding community.

Teaching literature is my vocation, but for more than twenty-five years collecting jazz music has been my avocation. The two have much in common, but there are two basic differences. First, jazz relies fundamentally upon spontaneous improvisation, whereas literature depends upon highly sophisticated arrangement. Second, jazz involves collective improvisation, whereas a work of literature, of course, must be the product of one intelligence. After the pleasure of the arranged and individual creation of literature, I find equal but far different pleasure in the spontaneous and collective creation of jazz. The two are arts perfectly complementary.

These are ideas. Man cannot be stagnant, nor can he passively accept. He seeks reasons; he develops theories. The individual is the focal point. It is in his actions one finds questions; it is in his thoughts one formulates answers. The theories he formulates account for each man's individuality; the variety and diversity of opinions is one strength of his ideas. In learning of his past, man hopes to be able to understand his future. In trying to better grasp another culture, he may be able to improve his own. In trying to answer "why", man may be able to see the reason and validity of his own thoughts and actions.

PUBLIC EVENTS

Allegheny's Public Events Program, utilizing over $18,000 provided by foundations created for its support, supplemented the academic program with lecturers and entertainers, providing both education and enjoyment. This year's lecture series was devoted to the "Free World," and the parts which various nations and organizations play in it. Simon and Garfunkle drew a large crowd and those who attended the Shakespeare plays were impressed by the quality of the productions. Ned Lorum, composer of art songs, and a jazz concert were the highlights of the spring public events schedule.

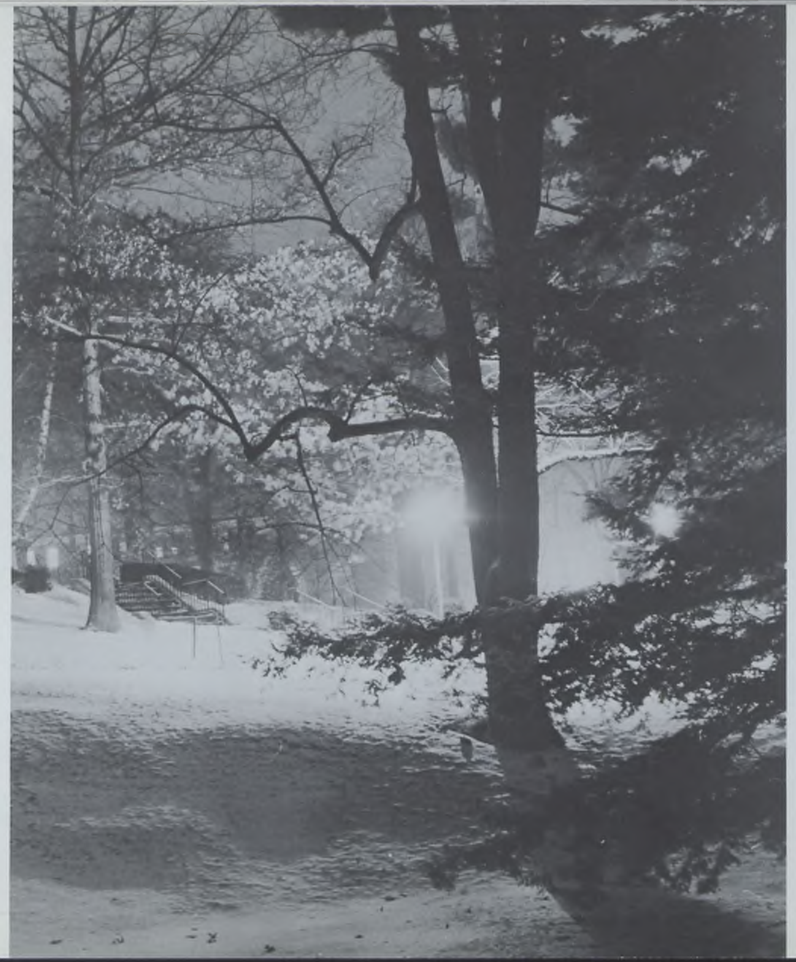
"Allegheny College is related to the Methodist Church. Services of worship in Ford Chapel are, however, ecumenical in intent and designed for men and women who are at home in the broad Protestant tradition and who rejoice in a united Christian witness.

Provision for these services is made in the conviction that personal maturity calls for the development of the spiritual life as well as the intellectual and the social, that faith and education belong together.

Participation in these services is open to all—to those whose commitment is expressed within the historic confessions of the church and to those who, in doubt and in faith, are honestly searching for and are open to the Spirit of God."



Man creates order in his chaotic world through the laws of science. One discovers that for every answer there are many more questions. Science is an area of concentration and exactness; here one must constantly calculate and recheck. It is not a process of knowing, but of discovering. The hours can be long, and the work difficult, but the challenge is there and cannot be ignored. Concentration, procedure and effort are all required. The answers continue to be sought and understood—not the "why" of a process, but the "how."

ASTRONOMY AND PHYSICS

Barbara Lotze, Ph.D.

Geologists study the earth, a particle in the universe composed of atoms of over 100 elements arranged in different ways. These atoms exist in many different environments. Each environment has a particular set of physiochemical forces which, in turn, act upon the atoms. A spectrum of matter is there to be explored.

So the geologist must become liberally educated in physics, chemistry, mathematics and biology and he must learn how to communicate his ideas clearly. Many of his feelings will affect other people. Consequently, he must be aware of his social obligations too.

However, long hours of tedious study quickly pay off. Our geology majors unlock some of the earth's riddles. And what is the reward? Exploration into the unknown and the satisfaction with being there first.

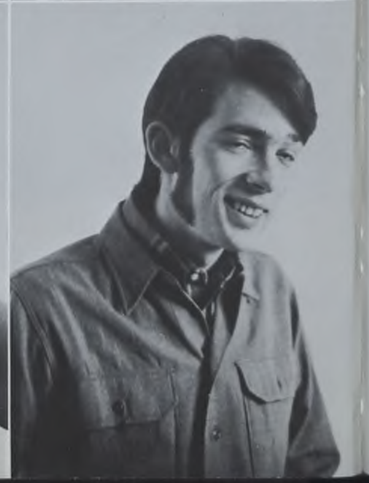
Going beyond the ordinary and achieving the excellent is the essence of Phi Beta Kappa. A national scholastic fraternity, its members are elected on the basis of their accomplishments in citizenship as well as in academics.



This is the crystallization of his four years. In the end, it is not so much what he has done or learned, but what he has become. The facts and theories for which he has crammed and worked, the grades which he has both achieved and missed, the courses which were taken, are now ready to be employed. The education no longer resides in the books which were bought, sold, underlined and stored. It is, instead, now contained within the student.

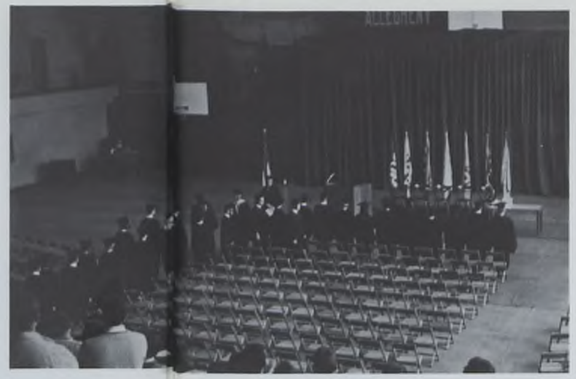
PHI BETA KAPPA



. . . it is necessary to question ones self with a willingness to participate in question asking, assessing the character of the knowledge that you have. Once a student has had the opportunity to ask his own question as an extension of a line of inquiry that he has already begun, once he has seen a perspective fall into place as he pursues the answers in any field of inquiry, he will never be quite the same type of individual again—and that, I contend, has something to do with higher education.

WHO'S WHO

An advantageous placement service is one of the benefits received by the twenty-two seniors elected to the annual national publication Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Nominated by members of their class, the fourteen men and eight women were cited for their personal achievements in scholarship, leadership, and service in the college community.

Col. Lewis Walker's 1894 shoes, equipped with the forerunner of the smooth, trim zipper we know today, took a beating before the Colonel and his associates were able to achieve the design, machinery, and financing for the new closure. Even after the present scoop design was invented in 1913 development and improvement continued, and continues today. The search for better ways to make a better product is one job Talon, Inc. never finishes.

Time and paper. The Kaldron office was filled with photographs, typewritten copy, mimeographed sheets that multiplied as we worked and no amount of throwing away or organizing seemed to help. It took a lot of time and a lot of paper to capture what we thought about this year on these pages.
