Disillusionment of Women:

May it not be that the women who are organizing over society are losing sight of their own unescapable relation if the thing is to be found, in their thoughts over the errors of men. It is a poor substitute for a sound society for women like to be turning their own children over to outside agencies.for care and training while they work social institutions for the care of neglected children, underfed children. It is too intensive a job for the woman to escape on the escuse she is trying to make a better society for her child.
