Dear Mr. Chambrun:

Your suggestion does, as you say, interest me, that is, If I understand it. You are suggesting to the Editor of a"wellknown magasine" the name of an author who you think might prepare an article of 2000 words on some phase of a subject in which you have proved that he is interested. This subject you do not reveal to the author until you find if the editor would be interested in what he has to say on the subject. If the editor is interested then the author must prepare a short outline suggesting his idea of treatment. If this passes the editor the article is ordered.

If you can interest your editor I am willing to consider the subject and see if I can make a satisfactory outline.

I hope this is clear.

Very sincerely yours,
