Paris, Maine, Oct. 27, 1895.

If may interest Miss Tarbell to know that Miss C. N. Andrews has the engravings of Napoleon, one of Josephine and a print of "House in which Napoleon was born at Ajaccio, in Corsica", none of which appeared in Miss Tarbell's Life of Napoleon as it was published in McClure's Magazine.

The engraving of Josephine and its companion, of Napoleon, were "engraved by Kasper 1823." The print of the house is stamped "Boston, Published by Wells & Lilly, 9[illegible] Court St." The second picture of Bonaparte bears no date.

Miss Andrews had the pleasure of reading Miss Tarbell's "Life" &c to the oldest class of boys in Perkins Inst. for the Blind at South Boston, Mass., early in the current year. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the more intelligent lads.

It may be well to say that the engraving of Napoleon which is unmarked is a picture of him well advanced in life. The broad sash is worn across his breast, and epaulets and insignia are conspicuous. It is a full face picture and without a hat. The coat is dark, showing a white waistcoat.
