March 5, 1935

Dear Mr. Dennison:

I have a little piece to write on the handling of the old by our better class industries - their pension systems, etc., - and I want mightily to put in a paragraph about your "Old Girls" at Brunswick. Would you object?

I have been looking over the Brunswick piece. Did you ever publish it? It seems to me to me you did with illustrations by John Adams but I cannot find it in my files and am doubting my impression. If it is not in print would you object to my trying to find a place for it in one of the national periodicals? It might serve a purpose. I rather resent the current notion that industry never did anything to humanize itself up to 1933.

If you have any resent peports on the working out of your pension system - the way it has stood up through the depression I would like to see them.

Very sincerely

Mr. Henry S. Dennison
