PREPARATORY TEAM WINS FROM SHARON.

The Score is 5 to 0 as a Result of Their Stiff Fight.

They Retrieve Their Former Defeat—The Game Marked by Dash and Spirit—Hines, Brown and Kennedy are the Stars—Good Rooting Throughout the Game.

After a week of hard and creditable scrimmaging against the varsity, and with a stubborn determination to retrieve a former defeat, the Allegheny Preps football eleven downed Sharon High on College Athletic field last Saturday by a score of 5 to 0.

Either team found a stiff proposition and both went into the game with dash and spirit. But the knights of the red and green with a clear eye and a cool head sized up their opponents and then outplayed them. The Iron King's sons had a ray of sunlight near the close of the second half, but a lunge, an end, and a punt put the Preps out of danger.

On defense the Prep line was a stone wall and on offense it could make a hole almost at will, especially through Sharon's left tackle. The Preps back field tore around the end for long gains. Only in punting were the Preps equaled by Sharon.

The entire Prep team deserves praise for the nervy game each man played, but the Brownie at quarter heads the list. He took the team like a general. In trying moments he used good judgment and at all times was cool headed. For long gains Hines was the sure man. His weight and speed made him a hard man to down. He alone advanced the ball for 175 yards during the game. French, too, made good gains. On the line Kennedy was the old warhorse. He always made a hole and never let a play come through him. Hart played his heavy man to a standstill. The ends played a good game on defense.

The loyal support of the Preparatory students was remarkable. The school in a body turned out and throughout the game kept up an incessant cheer for their heroes. Above the roar of the enthusiastic youths the musical tones of the girls' voices were heard. They pierced the callous hearts of the fighting braves, spurred them on, and won the day. College girls, where's your spirit

The Game in Brief.

Sharon kicked to the Preps, who advanced the ball 20 yards. Prep was then held for downs. Sharon, unable to advance the ball, punted. French, Hines and Spears made good gains through the line. The forward pass netted 10 yards. Hines made an 11-yard gain when Preps fumbled. Sharon fumbled. Spears made a 2-yard gain and French made a touchdown.

Sharon kicked off to Preps. Brown got the ball on the 20-yard line and returned the ball 12 yards. Hines burst through for 30 yards before he was downed. Preps were penalized twice for holding. Sharon held for downs. Sharon was forced to punt. Brown advanced the ball 10 yards. Sharon secured the ball and Hines made a fine tackle. Sharon punts. Ball went to Sharon on downs. Allegheny got the ball on a failure at forward pass. French and Bailey made 10 yards each. French and Hines advanced the ball to Sharon's 5-yard line.

Second Half.

Preps kicked to Sharon. Sharon advanced the ball 10 yards but failed to make first down. Hines made two gains of 20 and 10 yards. Preps were penalized. Sharon punted. Hines made 20 yards. The ball went to Sharon on a fumble. Sharon advanced the ball 25 yards when they were held. Preps punted. Hines made two fine tackles and Sharon was forced to punt. French made 16 yards on two gains and Hines went through the line for 10 yards. Preps were held for downs

BASKETBALL IS IN FULL SWING

LARGE SQUAD OF MEN REPORTED FOR PRACTICE WEDNESDAY.

Manager Gill Confident of a Winning Team—Captain Giesey and Russell of Last Year's Five are Back.

Over twenty-five men reported for basketball practice last Wednesday evening, and from present indications Allegheny will have another speedy five on the floor this year. Manager Gill is very confident that the team will be just as good, if not better than any team that has ever represented the gold and blue.

Of last year's five, Captain Giesey and Russell are back, and King and Stockton, both of whom played in varsity games last year will put in a big bid for a position on the team.

Baker, Phillips and Perry are among the new men who are putting up a good game, and with the material now in sight to choose from it looks as though Captain Giesey may have his hands full in choosing the five.

Prep School To Have Editor

C. P. MacDONALD TO SHOVE THE PENCIL FOR THE PREPS.

Quill Club Sanctions the Creation of a New Editorship on the Campus—Preps Elect a Temporary Reporter.

At the meeting of the Quill Club Thursday evening the members voted to allow the Preparatory School to appoint or elect in any manner they saw fit a Preparatory School representative for The Campus. His duties will be the writing up of all important Preparatory School happenings for the college weekly.

The report of the committee was given in chapel on Saturday and Mr. MacDonald was appointed acting correspondent, his duties to begin at once and to continue until a representative could be chosen by competition.

There was an old teacher named Thwack,
Who sat on his chair with a whack;
And remarked on arising,
"You may think it surprising,
But I don't like this kind of attack."

HONORED ALUMNUS PASSES AWAY

GEORGE W. HASKINS DIES SUDDENLY THURSDAY MORNING.

A Life Long Resident of Meadville—Long Connected With the College In Various Capacities—A Man of Rare Worth.

The death of Professor George W. Haskins of this place occured suddenly last Thursday morning, and came as a shock even to his near friends and relatives. A feeling of genuine sadness is felt by the whole community, and in particular by his college friends and former pupils.

George Washington Haskins was born in Randolph township, this county, May 27, 1842. He was educated in the county schools and in Meadville Academy. In 1860 he entered Allegheny College, graduating at the head of his class in 1864. After his graduation he studied law and was admitted to the bar. During this time he served as principal of the Academy, but now in 1868 gave up this position and entered law in partnership with John J. Henderson. He soon gave up his practice to accept the superintendency of the Meadville public schools, a position which he held until 1874. From this time until 1876 he occupied the chair of Latin Languages and Literature in Allegheny College. As a teacher he was rigid with his pupils, but more rigid with himself. He was strict in his requirement of the right sort of preparation, impatient with sham, but kind hearted and sympathetic toward all. In 1886 he resigned his professorship and resumed his practice of law, entering into partnership with John O. McClintock, and continuing in active work until his death.

Mr. Haskins was an active member of the Meadville Chamber of Commerce, an enthusiastic alumnus of Phi Kappa Psi, a loyal worker and officer of the First M. E. Church, and for twelve years a trustee of Allegheny college. "His highest ambition was to enjoy companionship with the Divine. He will be missed in the Board of Trustees, in the Alumni, in the legal profession, in the church, and in the community at large."

QUILL CLUB HOLDS SECOND MEETING

IN PARLORS OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Mr. Bright, Chairman of the Meeting—Discussion of American Poets—Evening Spent Enjoyably.

The Quill Club held its second meeting of the year in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, Thursday evening at six o'clock. Nearly thirty members were present to partake of the splendid dinner served by the ladies of the church. Prof. Wagstaff added enjoyment to the dessert by telling some good stories.

After the dinner a business session was held, in which the Quill club approved the proposition of the preparatory school to have a reporter for their column in the Campus. Mr. Bright was chosen as the Quill club's representative on the Campus Competition Committee to act with the editor-in-chief of the Campus and a third member of the committee whom they shall choose in directing and overseeing all competition.

Following the business session, a choice literary program was given. Mr. Bright acted as master of ceremonies. The program consisted of discussions of a number of our American poets. Mr. Mackey was the first speaker and gave an account of Whittier's life dwelling at some length on "Snowbound." Miss Cousins spoke on "Bryant." She recited a short poem which represented Bryant's attitude toward nature and his touch with it. Mr. Jones in his usual pleasing way gave an interesting account of the life of James Russel Lowell, reciting portions of the "Vision of Sir Launfal." Mr. Brown then read the amusing story of the "Child and the Bear," by James Whitcomb Riley. In conclusion Miss Courtney read a highly artistic and literary production on the life of Sydney Lanier. The program was enjoyed by all and the evening passed away all too rapidly.

CIVIL ENGINEERS FORM SOCIETY

FORMAL ORGANIZATION ON SATURDAY EVENING.

Next Meeting on Nov. 17—Committee Drafting Constitution—Purpose to Stimulate Interest in the Department.

The C. E. students met Saturday evening at the Delt House for the purpose of organizing an engineering society William Cappeau was elected temporary chairman. Only a preliminary organization was effected, the permanent policy is to be decided upon later. The next meeting is called for next Saturday, Nov. 17. The following committee on constitution was appointed: Professor Dutton, Messrs. Griggs, Hilborn, R. E. Miller and Phillips. Much time was taken up with a discussion of plans. The society intends to establish a reading room and supply scientific and engineering literature. The club cannot help but be a benefit to its members, supplying as it will increased interest on scientific subjects, and it will be a valuable addition to our college organizations.

FREDERICK PALMER GOES TO PANAMA

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT FOR THE ROOSEVELT PARTY.

An Honored Alumnus of College—Well Known in Newspaper Field—A Writer of the Current Novel.

It will be of interest to the student body to learn that Frederick Palmer, an honored alumnus of the college is one of the Roosevelt party that is visiting the Panama canal this week. Mr. Palmer goes to do some special corresponding for New York papers.

Mr. Palmer is well known in these lines of work. He came prominently before the people's eyes in the Japanese and Russian war. Besides this field of work he has gained considerable fame as a story writer. It will be remembered that his "Lucy of the Stars" appeared last spring and was most favorably received.

More Patriotism.

The same patriotic devotion and love of country that moves men to die in her defense, thrilled every loyal son and daughter of the Old Flag in Ford Chapel the other night. Perhaps a revelation of how much we did love the flag and all it represents came to us as the gray headed veteran proudly waved the stars and stripes aloft.

No more ennobling or inspiring influence could be brought to bear on our student life than much of this patriotic demonstration made possible by such occasions as Bishop McCabe's lecture.

College Sings.

Somewhere in our dim and distant history the "College Sing" was inaugaurated. At this function the entire student body assembled and sang lustily the praises of Old Alleghe. The experiment proved a great success and the weekly "Sing" was a strong factor in preserving a wide spread spirit. A revival of this institution this year would be a very timely innovation.

Eternal vigilance is the price of safety says a time honored and truthful adage. However strong and enthusiastic a college spirit may be certain processes of cultivation and fostering are essential to the maintenance of that spirit and its general promotion.

Are College Men Barbarians?

There sometimes come echoes from the woods or reports from men in practical life, both of which are attempts to show that college students are barbarians. College men do at times give this impression. The newspaper reports of their actions often add color to such an opinion. But the reports are essentially false. The facts are not put in just proportion and perspective. The actions of college men that give the impressions of barbarism are not characteristic. This conduct is accidental, incidental, not essential. It represents the bubbling over of animal spirits. Marching, cheering, and singing represent the outpouring of vigorous, healthy life.

Essentially the college man respects the dignity and fitness of things. He is more devoted to books than to pranks. He respects sholarship more than ignorance. He honors courtesy. He despises boorishness and abominates the boor. He has regard for historic results, forces and conditions. His fun is without malice and his sport has no evil intent.

COACH LEWIS DISCUSSES FOOTBALL

AN ABLE ARTICLE IN SUPPORT OF THE GAME.

Strong Argument to Show Worth of the Sport—Local Statistics Bear Out His Theory.

Football, the sport most popular among college students in general, is in danger of being discontinued by some institutions. The opponents of the sport are chiefly "parents and friends" of students, the majority of whom have never seen, much less understood a game of football. The opposition platform resembles the following:

1. Football is a form of manslaughter not yet legislated against.
2. Football overdevelops the physicial, while stunting the mental powers.
3. Football values brute strength above brains.
4. Football encourages trickery and deceit.
5. Football involves too great risk of injury, is too great a strain upon the players and interferes with their academic standing.

As a matter of fact football requires that a participant shall be in good physical condition. This means that regular habits must be observed; there must be stated hours for meals; the diet must consist entirely of wholesome food; the period devoted to sleep must be regular and sufficient in length. Opportunities for action while playing come and go in a flash, which means that to be successful, a player must think and act quickly—co-operation of mind and body.

He must not underestimate the ability of his opponent, but rather respect it. But he must have quiet confidence in his own ability to outplay his adversary—he must be self-reliant.

If outplayed by an opponent he must not lose his temper, for this would further handicap his ability and so weaken the team. This means putting his team's welfare or satisfaction ahead of his own; it results in self-denial and discipline

Referring in detail to the statement of the opposition, of the first assertion—the manslaughter clause—it may be said that in the statistics of a prominent Life Insurance Company football stands eleventh in a list of sports regarded as dangerous. The most dangerous is baseball, with horseback riding a close second, ice-hockey, lacrosse, etc. all ahead of football These statistics are arrived at by proportion, rather than by the actual number of accidents, so the figures are absolutely fair.

As football is so far down the dangerous list, and legislation will probably begin at the beginning, there is room for hope that a few years more of football may be played before the court calls, "case number eleven."

Regarding plank number two of the opposition platform it may be said that football cannot be taught to men who are slow to learn. To be a successful player a man must act on the instant, otherwise his opponent gets the better of him. Men are taught to offset greater weight and strength in opponents by exerting their own strength at the proper point and time.

And right here is when plank number three gets its splintering, for brute strength in football is worthless without brains. A player of 130 pounds can make a 200 pound man look like a toy ballon, as far as usefulness to his team goes, if the light man will use his brains.

Lewis, Harvard '96, the best center who ever played football weighed 168 pounds. Most of his opponents were men of 200 odd pounds, yet they were powerless against his brains and agility.

Hart, Yale '02, weighed 130, and Rockwell, Yale '05, weighed 140, and yet these men were considered leaders in the game. Many other instances could be cited, showing that brains are more necessary than physical strength alone, in making a successful player.

Plank four. Football encourages trickery and deceit. To be sure, there are players who do their best to evade rules, deceive officials, and in general give football a bad name. But these men are few in number, and are decidedly in disfavor among genuine players.

No man can deceive others regarding physical courage in football. He either has "nerve" or he hasn't. If he tries to injure an opponent secretly or openly, his mind is not on the game itself and his team's effectiveness is crippled. Furthermore, the rules of the game are plain and those who would circumvent them are not true lovers of football. No man has ever learned deception as a result of becoming a football player, and there are many who have learned by becoming players that deceit and trickery are considered contemptible by the great majority of their fellow-players.

Regarding plank five it has already been stated that football ranks eleventh in the list of dangerous sports. A few facts regarding the present season at Allegheny might prove enlightening The squad at present numbers 24 men. One member has a bruised elbow and another recently ran a nail into his hand—by way of explanation let it be said that none of the nails in the football were loose, this one protruding from a board near the edge of the practice field. The other twenty-two men are in good physical condition. The squad has averaged 24 members during the season. Practice has been held five days a week for six and one half weeks. During this time there has been no injury sufficient to cause a moment's delay in practice, nor has a single player been excused from practice by reason of injury.

In addition to the above practice six games have been played, averaging for y-five minutes each. In the first game a player was so injured that he was removed from the game. Three days later he was again in condition to play.

In the same game, time was called for a player suffering from nausea resulting from poor physical condition.

In the second game there were no injuries.

In the third game time was called twice for the same player, nausea having resulted from nervousness.

In the fourth game time was called twice for slight injuries, the delay amounting to eighty-four seconds. and both players being able to continue in the game.

In the fifth game there were no injuries.

In the sixth game there were no injuries. One man was removed because of poor physical condition, having been with the squad only one week.

As the result, then, of six and one-half weeks of football, participated in by 24 men, the grand total of injuries shows one bruised elbow, one sore hand, and one player forced to retire from a game, but able to play again three days later. And yet it is claimed that the risk of injury is great!

That the strain of playing is too great to be beneficial hardly seems a logical conclusion in view of the following record kept during the six and one half weeks of the present football season at Allegheny.

The records of the entire squad cannot be given, as one sheet of the record has been lost, owing to the carelessness of an assistant. Compared with weight on the first day of practice, September nineteenth, the men who have gained are:

Ginn, 10 lbs.; Hickernell, 7 lbs.; Ball, 3 lbs.; Brown, 4 lbs.; Stockton, 10 lbs; Benedict, 11 lbs.; Nelson, 9 lbs.; Evaul, 1 lb.; Stewart, 10 lbs.; Ruhling, 2 lbs.

Lost in weight:

Robinson, 9 lbs.; Cole, 6 lbs.; Sherwin, 6 lbs; O'Connor, 4 lbs.

lost weight—the first three were all overweight at the beginning of the season—Robinson weighed 190, Sherwin 212 and Cole 222. These men are in better condition to-day by being lighter. O'Connor lost seven pounds at the beginning of the season. He has since gained three, and if training were to continue a month longer, he would doubtless exceed the weight at which he began playing.

That men will gain weight during a continued period of strenuous daily exercise, shows conclusively that that exercise is beneficial. Such weight is not superfluous fat and a burden to the possessor, but is sound flesh and muscle.

The last splinter in the opposition platform is the claim that football interferes with academic standing. It would seem on the contrary that a man whose habits of sleep and diet are regular, and whose health is above the average, is in a position to do well in his studies. It is admitted with regret that there exist professors who will mark a man low on account of membership on any athletic team, but these persons are few and far between.

At Allegheny strict watch is kept on an athlete's standing, and weekly reports made regarding it. So far this season but one man has been removed from the squad because of low rank. As this man's work did not improve after he had been debarred from football it is safe to say that football never was the cause of his low rank as a student.

A good intellect is not sufficient in itself. It depends for existence on the functions of the body. Football builds up the body at the same time. Football develops manliness as a result of hard earnest work, and therefore genuine manliness; it teaches the player to face danger in a calm self-possessed way, and to act quickly and forcibly. He may run the risk of physical injury, but he forgets that, for selfishness is forgotten and he considers himself merely an instrument in the accomplishment of a certain project.

To the writer it seems criminal that parents should deny their boys such an opportunity as football playing affords for the development of manly qualities. There may be other ways of making men of their sons, but this is one way and a good one

Should a single means to such an end be neglected? There is some danger, but isn't the object worth the risk? Most emphatically "Yes!" and when parents finally decide to act fairly toward their boys, and to form their opinion of this splendid autumn game from their own conclusions, after careful investigation of rules and actual play, rather than from the exaggerated statements of meddling maiden aunts and morbid headline writers, the vast majority will decide that football is worth while.

Glee Club In Drill Practice

THE TRI-WEEKLY PRACTICES BEING CONDUCTED BY MR. MANVILLE.

Good Material Out—Mr. Lick arranging Splendid Program—Manager Coggan Has Good Trips in View.

The town people have been puzzled for some time by curious phenomena of sound issuing from the College of Music building. An investigation has resulted in the discovery that Mr. Harry Manville is in the habit of putting his embryo Glee Club squad through tri-weekly scrimmages at this place.

Seriously, good promising Glee Club material was never more in evidence than this season. The leader reports a membership of twenty men, all strong reliable voices. The entire club is working hard and each rehearsal witnesses marked improval.

Mr. Manville, director of the Penna. College of Music, has charge as usual of the Glee Club.

Mr. Maxwell J. Lick was re-elected to the leadership a short time ago after one very successful season. Mr. Lick's ability as a vocalist is well known in college circles. The leader is arranging entirely new numbers and promises a very delightful program,

Mr. Coggan, ex-manager of this publication, has been elected to the managership of the Club. Mr. Coggan is working out a strong schedule including two trips during the Christmas and Easter vacations.

should consider these facts:

During the past three years, the best vacancies in Pennsylvania colleges, normal schools, and high schools were filled through this agency.

We have attained a position in our field of effort that requires practically all our time in responding to direct calls from school authorities.

We are about to enter our twenty-third season, and consequently have nearly a quarter of a century's experience to guide us. We have organized agencies in Denver and Atlanta, both doing excellent work

College Council Meets Wednesday

IN THE ORATORY OF THE CHAPEL.

Mr. La Bounty, Chairman—Reports are Submitted, Discussed, and Adopted—Election of Class Officers to Come in Order—Rules for Freshmen Accepted.

The college council met Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the oratory. Mr. La Bounty acted as chairman. Mr. Jones submitted the following report which was adopted:

Article I. Class officers shall remain in office until successors have been chosen.

Article II. Sec. 1: The president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the Senior class shall be elected two college days after the official chapel seating has been given.

Sec. 2. Senior class day speakers shall be elected on the second Tuesday after the opning of the second semester.

Article III. The Junior class election shall be held the college day following the election of the president of the Senior class.

Article IV. The Sophomore class election shall be held the college day following the Senior class election.

Article V. The Freshman class election shall be held the college day following the Sophomore class election.

The second report was then read. It was as follows:

To the chairman and members of the college council:

Your committee on cane rushes respectfully report that in their opinion all cane rushes and class scraps should be held under the supervision and control of the committee of four, two of whom shall be elected by the Senior and two by the Junior class.

The election of this committee shall be on the same day as the election of the other class officers. It shall be the duty of this committee to formulate the rules under which the rush or scrap shall be held, to set the date and places, to prepare the ground and to referee and umpire the contest. They shall have absolute control of the field and of all matters pertaining to the contest. And they shall be responsible for fair play and good order.

W. T. Dutton,
H. H. Hull,
Wm Cappeau.

An amendment was made and adopted that the committee consist of three—two Seniors and one Junior. It was also moved and seconded that the presidents of the Sophomore and Junior classes in June be on the committee and that they elect the third member from the then Junior class. This was carried. The report with these amendments was accepted.

The rules laid down for the Freshmen by the upper classmen were read and adopted.

Funeral of George W. Haskins.

The funeral of the late George W. Haskins was held at his residence on State street Saturday at 3:30. Rev. Lucius H. Bugbee conducted the services, speaking briefly of Mr. Haskins' character as a rare and beautiful example of the harmonious union of sound, practical judgment with deep spiritual life. The Bar association of Crawford county and the Allegheny chapter of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity were present in a body.

The interment took place in the family lot in Greendale cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. A. M. Fuller and L. A. Leberman, Judge S. S. Mehard, of Pittsburg; Hon. John E. Reynolds, Judge F. J. Thomas and Prof. H. E. Wells.

EDGE HILL—a Sketch.

The soft afternoon brightness of the Warwick landscape deepened into a long twilight. Here and there over the country side rays of light streamed through vine-curtained cottage windows. In the thick hedge rows the birds chirped sleepily. The air was fragrant from the newly-mown meadows, beyond the high stone walls that border the hard, white turnpike. From a dark mass of oaks beyond there drifted through the evening stillness the warbling song of a nightingale. As her echoing notes grew in volume and filled the blossom perfumed air, the traveller, sleeping near the park wall was dreaming of singing angels. As he started up, roused by his pawing horse, was that a tear on his cheek or just a drop of dew from the primrose that hung over his face as he slept?

The half light of blending day and darkness still illumined the subdued coloring of the forests and meadows, as the traveller drew up his galloping horse at the foot of the wooded slope of Edge Hill. Directed to a short route the rider found himself on a rough cart track, harassed by frequent stiles and continually warned by signs "No Trespass." A little beyond a high gate opened into meadows of smooth, close cut grass. Just at the base of the hill, lying under a spreading, thick leafed oak tree, was the Keeper, a man in high boots and corduroys. Beside the stolid Keeper lay his heavy gun. "Bout a mile to the top of this 'ill" was his laconic and wholly characteristic observation. Half way up the rough winding road the weary traveller turned and looked down over the darkened meadows and fields below. Dimly the lights gleamed from the thatch roofed cottages in the valley beneath. Just ahead on the brow of the hill a grim, turreted stone tower frowned above the gently waving trees.

Once again in fancy the thundering peal of victory bursts from the throats of the Roundheads, as they follow the mighty presence of the great Cromwell over these forest covered slopes, and rough broken hills. Do not these massive towers and rocky fastnesses still ring with the mighty cry of the frenzied hosts as they conquer and die with shoutings of praise to the Almighty on their lips? Again and again the enemy breaks with the reeling shock of their mighty charges; the trusty steel reddens the shattered spray of the mountain brooks into rushing torrents A swelling battle hymn rises above the noise of the conflict. The day is won. Again around the campfires voices join in hymns that echo and re-echo over the hill sides. Now the fires no longer cast flickering shadows on the gnarled trunks and the singing voices die away. From a nearby farmyard comes the gentle lowing of cattle. Away in the darkened distance a village curfew is tolling.
