My dear Allan Nevins:

Do forgive me for having been so long in thanking you for the birthday greetings you sent. I should have done so - and intended to - the night of the Author's Club dinner but was caught up at the end and was out before I realized.

I do appreciate your having found so early in those back files of McClures something of mine which you remember - that is worth a great deal from so sound and interesting a worker as you are. At seventy five such a thing means a lot I want you to know!

I was so sorry not to hear all you had to say about the Author's Club the other night. What little you did say showed me that you would have made a contribution much more worthwhile than those the audience had been listening to.

The meeting did get away from the Chairman in a quite surprising way!

My love to Mrs. Nevins

Faithfully yours

Ida M. Tarbell
