Autobiography - Standard Oil Company

Use interview with in speaking of efforts to influence. Recall how Frank Vanderlip called me into the anteroom of Alexander Graham Bell's, at the dinner one night, and said to me that the National Bank people where he belonged were friends of the Standard Oil Company and they looked with concern on what I was doing. I do not remember what I replied. I do remember the shock it gave me. I think I said, "Well, I am sorry but of course that makes no difference to me." I heard nothing further from it. (See if there are any notes on the point.)
