Editor, The American,

New York City.

Dear Sir:

I have read Miss Tarbell's first tariff article and find it very instructive, especially to one who has given the thought to and has written as much upon the subject as I have.

I enclose herewith three of my articles, the letter to Senator Benson having been published in the Topeka Capital, the Kansas City Star, the Des Moines Capital, the Chicago Record Herald.

The article Depression and Prosperity written largely in response to the claim of tariff stand patters that to the Dingley bill is due the prosperity of the last half dozen years. This article was published in the Star. The last article, a clipping from yesterday morning Capital has been published only in the Capital!

I had the first two articles printed in leaflets as you will see for distribution.

The article, Depression and Prosperity ought to have a wide circulation, wider than it has had. I have never seen the subject of the causes of change from depression to prosperity presented in the same light. I have had for these several articles letters from an organization in New England, a suggestion from John Sharp Williams that Depression and Prosperity should be published in some magazine of wide circulation and if it should meet your approbation should like very much if you can make use of it to do so, this without regard to the question of price for the article.

Respectfully,

H. B. Kelly
