Miss Martha Van Rensaelaer,
United States Food Administration,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Miss Van Rensaelaer:

When I returned to New York yesterday, I found on my desk a letter of yours, in which you said that it would be possible to send your circular letters to the Publicity Chairman of the Woman's Committee.

I am writing today to my office asking Mrs. Wilkes of the News Department to send the news to you. She will at once write to the Chairman, saying that they may expect these communications.

In another letter which I find on my desk, you ask if it could be arranged for a representative from your office to see the reports which come to us on food conservation. There will be no difficulty about that. The items which seem to be of sufficient importance for news are all compared and sent to the news department. If your representative will go to Mrs. Wilkes, she will let her see the cards. If this does not seem satisfactory, I will arrange, the next time I am down, that anything else that is in the files be opened to her.

I think your little slip on the result of the first year's food adminsitration ought to be sent out particularly. If you could send a package of them to the news department, they can go out with all our letters.

Was sorry to get away from Washington, without a report of your interview Friday morning. Is there anything you could write me?

Faithfully yours,

IMT/EC
