Personal

January 28, 1927.

Miss Frances Schlegel,
8351 Second Boulevard,
Detroit, Mich.

My dear Miss Schlegel:

Thank you for sending me the copy of the article which so arrested your attention that you wrote me your interesting letter. I could not imagine what you were talking about. I remember that a young woman got past my closed door one day and questioned me along the lines of that article. I never knew what she had written. I am glad to see it. These interviews usually make you say things so foolish that you blush to read them.

Your letter sounds cheerful. I should say you needed no counsel from me. Attacking things that come up from day to day with a courageous spirit and with a determination to wrest from them all the good things in them is about as soon to bring results as anythingone can do. After all, we build on our daily achievements and if the days work is not right we have injured the future by just so much. So, courage and good cheer to you.

Sincerely yours,

IMT BWK.
