July 10, 1920

Mr. Charles Jacobson
Little Rock, Ark.

My dear Mr. Jacobson:

Thank you for your letter of July 1. I do remember meeting you in Little Rock when I spoke there several years ago. It is kind of you to recall our visit.

It is kind of you, too, to take the trouble to comment the "Liberty" article. I have been for some time greatly disturbed over the situation and I do feel that I want to put down, as temperately as I can, anything that I have in mind that seems to me worth public consideration.

The injustice that it done by discrimination in the Federal enforcing of Prohibition is most disturbing. It is difficult to get sufficient material of absolute authenticity to present the matter publicly, yet I do think that every candid observer must feel that there is unevenness.

In case I should want to take up this side of the matter in an article, would you be willing that I should use what you have written in your letter of July first? I could do it without identifying you, if you would prefer not to have your name or the name of your town used.

Any other example of the same nature I should be very glad to have, if you should take the trouble to write me.

Thanking you again for your letter, believe me

Sincerely yours
