My dear Miss Tarbell,

I am enclosing a copy of "The Philalethian" which was published by the Philalethian Literary Society, composed of Oxford College girls in the early days. It is interesting to know that it appeared every month during the school year and at first was set up by their own hands on a printing press in one of the large rooms of the old College. Later on, it was taken to Hamilton to be printed. At that time, there were two Literary Societies, the Philalethian and the Calippean, both founded in 1850. They still enjoy a flourishing existance.

Hoping that you may enjoy this as much as we have, I am

Cordially yours,

Jane Sherzer
