Mrs. William Brown Meloney, Editor
The Delineator.

Dear Madame:-

I have always been a very earnest and conscientious worker; I feel that each person should try to make the world a little better place for having lived therein. I have been saying for many years that I hoped to devote my whole time and energy after I reached the age of fifty years towards doing what I could to relieve the world of some of its misery, wretchedness and poverty, also to do all in my power to lessen crime, and to reduce if I possibly could in any degree, some of the graft and crookedness in politics.

I will appreciate any suggestion you might give me as to organizations already formed along these lines, with whom I might affiliate, or with whom I might place my services in some capacity. I know you will gladly give me whatever information you can.
