My dear Miss Tarbell,

Will you kindly refer me to the article written by you which contains this sentence.

"The human heart does not change. It demands its mate - always was and always will, &c."

I found the quotation in an article on Permanent Monogamous Wedlock in the American Journal of Sociology, but no due to the article or book from which it was taken.

My line of work is growing in interest all of the time. I am particularly pleased to have something to quote from you on the subject.

Very sincerely,

Leonine M. Allen,
