Dear Miss Tarbell,

I ordered sent to you the other day a copy of my little story, ' A Warwickshire Lad .' In response to the appeal sent out to us all, I imagine, by the committee working towards a proper obsevance of The Shakspeare Tercentenary, I have ventured to offer this as my contribution. Drawn entirely from the biography and the plays I am hoping it may have value in the school-room and home for children.

It is good news that you are to come to Louisville and the Rice's in April. It will do the Martins great good to see you. And I am writing to beg one thing of you. That however brief your stay and full your time you will spend one night at least, or more if you can with us. It will be joy to me, and gratication and pleasure to Attwood. He is better but has yet to be still better. Otherwise he will get no real benefit out of your visit. Alice will be willing, I know. My love to both the girls, the one when you are writing.

Always and faithfully yours,

George W Martin.
