Miss Tarbell.

My dear Madam.

Miss Schuyler
tells me that you have a sprained ankle, a very hard thing to bear.

She asks me to send you my copies of the Sanitary Bulletin, but there must be fifty of them, if not more.

Shall I send them now, or would you rather wait until you can come here and look at them?

If my eyes were good for anything I would tell you what was in them. I have added to them a few other papers which all bear upon the subject that you want.

Allow me to express my regret for your accident, and believe me,

Respectfully Yours
Ellen Collins
