Dear Mr. Johnson:

I have just returned from five months abroad and find on my desk your note of October 12, which I fear has not been acknowledged.

I wish I did have the time to write an article on Susan B. Anthony. She was a fine old girl and I always like to have a chance to pay a tribute to her; but I cannot possibly do it before March. I am swamped with promised work. Thank you for remembering me.

Very sincerely yours
