Mr. T. C. Fisher,
701 Realty Building,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Fisher:

I was so busy before leaving Louisville, that I did not have time to send you my address. For the next three days, it will be Hotel Orlando, Decatur, Illinois, after that Hotel Leland, Springfield, Illinois for probably two weeks. My permanent address is 120 East Nineteenth Street, New York.

I shall be mighty glad to have the pictures. Mr. Martin told me that Mr. Veatch had promised to see that I had a map made after the latest findings. I shall appreciate this enormously. If anything new should be found out, I shall be grateful if you will let me know.

Do you think it entirely chimerical to suggest to the Filson Club that they excavate at least the two long graves in the yard of the Long Run meeting house? I frankly have little hope of anything being discovered, but my judgment in matters of historical research is, that one should let no stone - in this case no dirt - go unturned. The work, if done, should be done by the Filson Club. What do you think of the idea?

Perhaps you will remember I spoke of this the other day when we were at the graveyard, but Mr. Procter's skepticism about there being any remains at all, rather cooled me. I have returned, however to my original judgment, that it ought to be done. What do you think?

I am very grateful to you, dear Mr. Fisher, for your generous courtesies to me, in Louisville. I want to ask one more favor - that you will assure Mrs. Weatherbee, when you have a chance, that my intention was to stop at her house and see her mother, on my return from our visit to the Lincoln farm, but that it was so late that I did not feel that I should delay my hosts.

With all good wishes,

Very sincerely yours,
