

Bound up in Chicago - Wednesday
New York Central Lines

En Route

Dear Eleanor.

You were characteristically thankful to end in that wire!

I've. I'd like to learn to be as thankful as you - that's one thing I'm going over to him was for. What you were saying that last afternoon in W. J. has made me think a lot about the Prussianism in all of us. That we've got to fight.
Prussianism is precisely why oppressive materialism and materialism, just plain selfishness - is it a fight really between selfishness & materialism on one side - and decency, idealism and the brotherhood of man on the other.

You're one of the few people I know who have always fought on the right side - and I just want you to know that if I ever do anything on the right side, you'll be to blame! There's nothing in the game but service anyway.
Of course I wish there were know one I knew going in this thing - but I've always perhaps been too dependent on my friends - and ~~it~~ would be a bad thing to have to strike out & make new ones - I know that Sir decided you were Sir mother's & impatient to be off -

I'll never tell Sir how you worried her putting her in the excruciating class with me in ~~the~~ my - I'm glad of your defence - I hope you're telling the truth but I suspect you I credit you with honorable intentions not to break over the rules but your mistlewood so many years, too hard for you to reform -

Tell Ella I showed her postcard - I am thinking I ought to go to a mental specialist & be examined.

I wish I could see you with 150!
