New York, December 29, 1919

Dear Mr. Dunlap:

I have your letter of the 27th with your correspondence with Mr. Phillips enclosed. I have been slow in trying to crystallize my ideas on the series of Woman in Industry which you suggested, but I have kept the matter in mind. I have been more and more convinced that I should like to try something which might eventually become a book. I am enclosing a tentative list of subjects, arranged in the order in which I think they should be treated. These could be handled either as chapters in a serial, if we concluded that that would be the wiser way to treat the material; or handled as page articles, which Mr. Phillips suggested to you. There is a possibility that they might turn out to be a cross between the two, that is, they would have more or less technical information, and a good deal of humanizing or editorializing. I wish you would look these over, and tell me what you think of them. I will send a list to Mr. Phillips with a copy of this letter; and then possibly a little later we could get together for the lunch. It would not be possible for me to do it the first of this week, and I presume Mr. Phillips will go away for New Year's. How about the first of next week?

With all good wishes for the New Year, believe me, my dear Mr. Dunlap,

Very sincerely yours,

Mr. John C. Dunlap,
Engineering Magazine,
New York City.

Digital Image, 2009. The Ida M. Tarbell Collection, 1890-1944, Allegheny College Pelletier Library.