

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED AT
THE BROOKLYN INSTITUTE OF ARTS & SCIENCES.

1. With one of your own articles as an example, will you kindly take us behind the scenes, and show us just how you wrote it -- how you got the idea, and how you gathered and assembled the material, how you developed and polished it?
2. How do you usually obtain ideas for articles?
3. How do you usually gather facts for your articles?
4. Do you make an outline of your article before you write it?
5. How can one put "kick" into their writing.
6. What is the main trouble with articles beginners write?
7. Will you please discuss magazine markets.
8. Would you advise a beginner to submit ideas for articles to the editors, or is it a better plan to write the articles and submit them?
9. As you look back over your own career, what were the things you most needed to know when you first began to write?
10. Will you tell us about how you first broke into print -- the mistakes you made, and how you made a hit with the reading public.?
