

December 12, 1939

Dear Mr. Watson:

Thank you for your prompt attention to my letter of December 7th, as well as for your willingness to talk with me about your women employees and your women operators. There is no hurry. After the first of January will suit me admirably.

What I want, dear Mr. Watson, is to get your conclusion from your long experience about the real value of women in our business life. This, of course, not to be quoted, unless you are willing.

After the first of January I shall take the liberty of asking you to set a date for our interview.

Thank you for your good holiday wishes. I hope you will have all the good cheer that you deserve.

Very sincerely yours

Mr. J. Watson
