

June 30, 1939

Dear Mr. Leigh:

I came back to town the other day to find your letter of June 16th on my desk. I should so much like to take advantage of your invitation to see Mrs. Leigh's work and have a visit with you both, but I regret that I cannot do it while I am in town this time. I have been rather done up and went to the country to rest and find now that I did not take quite long enough. Now I am off for the rest of the summer I think.

Won't you let me come and see you in the Fall? It would be a real pleasure. I really regret that I cannot come now.

Very sincerely yours

Mr. W. R. Leigh
