Dear Mrs. Cookman:

Thank you for your letter.

Yes, I have thought about writing a summing up of what I have seen going on in the world. The last chapter touches it, though it is tied up too closely, I fear, with the narrative to be suitable for an article. Suppose we let the matter rest until Mr. Gould has looked over the manuscript and then if you think it worth while I can go up and we can talk things over.

What would you think of that?

With all good wishes

Very sincerely
