

1922-08-10

Letter: Ida M. Tarbell to Daniel S. Sanford, August 10, 1922

Tarbell, Ida M.

<http://hdl.handle.net/10456/21362>

Allegheny College. All rights reserved.

All materials in the Allegheny College DSpace Repository are subject to college policies and Title 17 of the U.S. Code.

August 10, 1922

Mr. Daniel S. Sanford,
Bedding Ridge, Conn.

My dear Mr. Sanford:

What a hopeful soul you are to suppose for one moment that I would be an acceptable candidate for Senator McLean's seat!

I am as convinced as I am of anything in the world that they would not look at me. Moreover, that if they should be so rash I would be overwhelmed. The views I hold on labor, tariff, foreign relations, would snow me under. I would not object in the least to that if I could have a chance to go up and down Connecticut and tell them was I think; but it is out of the question for me to seek that chance.

I work for my living, dear Mr. Sanford. I try to make the work I do contribute a little to the general good as I see it. Doing one's job seems much more important to me these days than politics. I am growing more and more of the opinion that the chief thing that ails us is too much politics, too much organization, too much talk. I contribute my quota constantly to the latter, of course, but I try to make it as harmless as I can.

No, dear Mr. Sanford, much as I am interested in your faith that I could secure the nomination, and your confidence that I could make a respectable run, I shall have to tell you that I could not think of it.

If I were going to be in the country this week I should come up and repeat what I am saying here, but the probability is that I shall not be there until the 19th. Then maybe we can get together, but what I shall have to say is in substance what I have said here.

Love to Mrs. Sanford.

Faithfully yours,