Dear Min Tarbell,

I found for a time no opportunity to talk over with Mr. Scribner the subject of our conversation the other day. But I have now done so, and I am sorry to have to report that he hardly thinks it would be advantageous for us to "take over" the books, though he expressed himself as very sensible of your courtesy in making the suggestion to me. It was very kind of you, and you must not think together with me since we may have one that of practice thanks. It was nice to see you again — and so unchanged as这也 one feel as old as much younger as the intervals had been long! I hope you will find it an easy matter to make satisfactory arrangements about the books, but one of my regrets is that I shall not see you so often, as I might have counted on if they had been transferred here.

Sincerely yours,
