Dear Miss Tarbell:

I have been somewhat delayed in writing my appreciation of our short visit with you because I had expected before this to refer to the Cosmopolitan manuscript which you sent to Mr. Marshall.

I did appreciate very much the privilege of meeting you and discussing the things of interest that you have found in our organization. I hope that we may be of further assistance in furnishing you information and data for the preparation of your chapter in the book on the story of civilization.

I read your manuscript last night and returned it to Mr. Marshall this morning so that he could send it back to you without any further delay. It has already been kept here too long. That was partly due to the fact that Mr. Marshall has been ill and that after his return others who were anxious to see it have been away.

I consider your story extremely interesting as a part of your series on the American Plan. I am certainly pleased that you found so much of interest in our educational and employe work and you have certainly written about it in a most interesting and helpful way from the Westinghouse standpoint.

My only suggestions in connection with the manuscript are one or two notes that I have made for Mr. Marshall pertaining to fact. I should feel very much out of order to attempt any other suggestions or additions.

Yours very truly,

Manager, Publicity Bureau
