Christmas Article:

I think the key is in Clara's letter where she says "my thoughts always go back to those first Christmases we had in Connecticut when Caroline was a little girl and before she was born when we hung up her little undershirt and decorated the tree picked from the back yard with pop corn and holly berries.

Brave and beautiful. She has had no happier Christmas, I think, since.

The notes I have made that include the Christmas list and its ups and downs. It should include that first Christmas in Paris. It should include the valiant effort the millions of people are making to rally their courage and belief that love rules the world after all.
