Dear Madam:-

Received yours of the 27th. I should be much pleased to comply with your request, but I fear I will not be in a position to give you such assistance. I did not write out my address, but merely made rough notes, which I send you herewith enclosed, apologizing for the character in which you will find them. I do not expect that they will be of any service to you, but such as they are, you are welcome to have them.

Mrs. Blackwell may have gathered the impression that I had my address written out, but as a matter of fact, I spoke extemporaneously, merely referring to my notes as reminders.

If I can give you any information concerning the laws of New Jersey relating to women, I should be pleased to place myself at your service. When you are through with these notes, please return them to me.

Dict. N.R.

Respectfully,

C. McK. Whittemore
