Dear Miss Tarbell:

I cannot tell you how happy I was to meet with you yesterday and to know that you are to write the first part of "Women at Work" for us. The tribute to be one to these business and professional women who have been in their respective fields since 1893.

Your part will be from 1893-1900. It may be written exactly as you wish to do it—and it is to be 1500 words in length. Our budget allows us the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars each ($150. each) for those five authors who have so graciously consented to write for us.

Please find enclosed a few notes on "What Can A Woman Do" by Mrs. M. L. Rayne, published in 1893 and obtainable (for reference) at the 42d Street Branch of the New York Public Library.

Our deadline for copy is December first.

Again, please accept our very great thanks for your sterling help on the project.

Yours sincerely

Alice Wade Robinson
