Dear Miss Tarbell:

Because of my absence from Detroit I have been remiss in acknowledging your very great courtesy in sending me that classic from your pen entitled "He Knew Lincoln". You have so graciously inscribed it that I shall ever retain it as one of my most choice possessions.

I am of course delighted to know that you are pleased with the "smallest book in the world"; and I consider a very happy coincidence that I should have received some copies of this little book just at the time I had the privilege of renewing my acquaintance with you.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons desires to be remembered to you. We both hope it may not be long before we again meet, either in Detroit or New York.

With very sincere regards, believe me
