Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
141 East Twenty-fifth St.,
New York City.

My dear Miss Tarbell:-

Judge Creighton tells me that his address on Lincoln as a Lawyer, about which you wrote me some time ago, was entirely extemporaneous; that his notes on the subject would not fill a postal card. He has promised to reduce the address to writing at the earliest opportunity. He is a very busy man, however, and it may be some time before he gets around to it. I think quite likely he can produce something of historic value.

Very sincerely yours,

J. M. Caud Davis.
