

November 23, 1937

Dear George Barnard:

I am tremendously impressed by this head of Lincoln pictured in last Friday's New York Times. It seems to me a noble and profound conception. I should have been there Saturday to see it but that I am a little under the weather and ordered to the country for a couple of weeks for a rest. When I get back I am going to ask you to let me come in and have a good look at it.

I have always felt that the noblest head yet made, the truest, was that of your Lincoln statue. This is another conception and a worthy follower, if I do not mistake.

With affection and admiration

Mr. George Gray Barnard
700 St. Washington Avenue
New York City