Dear Miss Tarbell,

I thank you very much for the books. I (being a boy scout), am especially interested in the scout edition. I am reading it and enjoy it very much.

In the first part of the scout edition you tell about the cabin which Lincoln was born in. It said that the cabin had ten logs to a side. A man gave me a present which was supposed to be an exact miniature of Lincoln's birth cabin, and it has six logs to a side. I would like to know which is right. With lots of love from all,

Roger Barrett
