

December 2, 1939

Dear Miss Fox:

"Ridgeways" is on my reading table. I have a habit of galloping through books - I must say that most of them encourage that habit. I am sure Judge Fox would consider it reprehensible. But you have produced a book that must be read sentence by sentence. What care and feeling you have put into this book. I shall read it all and possibly write you again.

And thank you for the inscription. It is I who should be thanking you, dear Miss Fox, for the pleasure and stimulus that you gave me. Perhaps we can do it again.

I am treasuring the Lincoln story and meditating just how to use it to the best advantage. Of course I will let you know when finally I have decided.

It is a real satisfaction that I have caught up with you.

Cordially yours

Miss Frances Fox
126 Washington Place
New York City