

Cale says you are feeling better. I am so glad. I am as stiff as any old party you ever saw and with an exasperating case of paralysis agitans in my right side, but it gives me no pain although there is a certain exhaustion. I take such care of myself, Alice, never go out in the evening, or practically never, sleep every afternoon. I think I shall go out and see The World of Tomorrow but I am not too sure. The World of Yesterday seems to be my chief relaxation.

Do write me when you have time.

Love to you both and luck to the white poppies

Affectionately
