Dear Madam:

Many thanks for the Red Cross Magazine, and with my face suffused a deep crimson I read the article about your humble servant. In painting the description Miss Tarbell used too heavy a brush I think.

I am returning the "Life of Lincoln" and it afforded lots of interest to the listeners, some of the anecdotes I would have to go over again and again. Still they think Robert E. Lee is the "Beau Ideal Sans Peur et Sans Reproche." I think myself that he filled the true meaning of the word "Gentlemen". I returned a box of books about a month ago. Thanking you, I am

Very respectfully,
