The debate between Allegheny and Washington and Jefferson Colleges was held at First Memorial Church, Wednesday, May 5th, at 8 p.m. President Crawford presided. Hon. Jesse R. Fisher, of Jamestown, N.Y.; Rev. F. ante. The question for debate was: "That courts should be established in the United States for the compulsory arbitration of disputes between employer and employed." One. Two. The occasion is rare when one has the opportunity of listening to a more responsive and forceful argument than that which Mr. Fisher and his colleague presented. Mr. Fisher showed the necessity of the bill, and the importance of the measure by means of well-rounded and well-lighted arguments. His chief reason was that the bill was needed; that it was needed not only in the interest of the worker, but in the interest of the employer, as well. The employer was just as much interested in the bill as the worker was.

Mr. Fisher mentioned the need for such an arbitration system in New York City, and showed how the bill would benefit the city. He also mentioned the need for such a system in Allegheny College, and showed how the college would benefit from it.

Mr. Fisher's argument was well-organized, and he was able to present it clearly and concisely. He was able to show the necessity of the bill, and the importance of the measure, and he was able to do so in a way that was easy to understand.

The debate was an exceedingly close one, and the judge was invited to cast his vote. The judge was asked to decide which side had the better argument, and the judge decided that the affirmative side had the better argument. The affirmative side was represented by Messrs. W. S. Swanson, and W. P. Highberger, of Allegheny, and Messrs. D. F. Morrison, and W. P. Highberger, of Allegheny. The negative side was represented by Messrs. W. S. Swanson, and W. P. Highberger, of Allegheny, and Messrs. D. F. Morrison, and W. P. Highberger, of Allegheny.

The affirmative side argued that the bill was necessary, and that it would benefit both the worker and the employer. They showed how the bill would benefit the worker, and how it would benefit the employer.

The negative side argued that the bill was not necessary, and that it would not benefit either the worker or the employer. They showed how the bill would not benefit the worker, and how it would not benefit the employer.

The debate was a very close one, and the judge was asked to cast his vote. The judge was asked to decide which side had the better argument, and the judge decided that the affirmative side had the better argument.

There is a vague belief among men of affairs that the power of a man would say, Had I my hand, I would open my hand wide to a dispute brings the case before the court for disposal.

It is —this fact that has brought the case before the court for disposal.

An Advertised in the Sunday paper for the exhibition of the Superior and Best in the Western States. The natural language representation of this document is as follows:

Smith’s Toggery.

_That’s the Place Where College Boys Like to Buy Their Clothing and Furnishings, and do they buy there?_ This place has been the college boy’s haven and is it more popular than ever this season—for many reasons. First, because they are used as they like to be used, because we make a specialty of Clothing and Furnishing for Men and College Men; because we have extra style if you want it.

Here is what we’ve done since college closed last fall term. We’ve taken the second floor of the block and remodeled it, and after the fourth inning gave Allegheny. The greatest improvement gives us four times the room that we had last term. We have four times the stock of clothing and fixings that we had.
