My dear Mr. Woollicott:

You gladden my heart when you say that you are willing to accept my word on Eisenschimi's "Why Was Lincoln Murdered". Anyone doing as much as you are to help the public in its choice and appreciation of books deserves all the help his fellow craftsmen can give him. I owe you much - latest and greatest - your talk on the Gettysburg Speech. I missed the first five minutes but heard enough to be mightily moved and uplifted.

Of course I treasure what you say about my knowing what I am talking about in the Eisenschimi's review and above all the tribute to clarity. These are the two things I hold highest in writing as I do it. My worse sins - and they are many - come from neglecting these essentials in my craft credo. You are like a good Spring tonic.

With real gratitude, believe me

Yours very sincerely
