Dear Miss Tarbell:

I have just learned from Miss Cutler of the Hotel Lincoln that your Secretary enquired of her some time ago the title of my book. I am therefore taking the liberty of enclosing the publisher's announcement, and thanking you for your interest.

We are now arranging a Lincoln's Birthday luncheon, to be held on February 12th in the Blue Room of the Hotel Lincoln at 1 P.M. Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott, grandson of Owen Lovejoy, who gave such an inspiring address last May, has agreed to speak for us again. Judge William Harman Black, of the New York State Supreme Court, will also speak, as will Dr. John H. Finley. We hope that you will honor us with your presence, and if you should feel like speaking we would feel more highly honored.

Hoping that your health has improved, and with best wishes in which Mrs. Wakefield joins, I am

Cordially yours,

Sherman X. Wakefield
