Dear Mr. Sipe:

How pleased I am that you should use my "Footsteps of the Lincolns" on your pilgrimage to the historic places connected with Abraham Lincoln's life in Indiana and Illinois.

Some day I hope you will make the pilgrimage from Hingham southwest to Kentucky, and possibly by that time there will be a better guide book than my Footsteps. I found it a fascinating trip.

It is very good of you to call my attention to this new proof that the Pennsylvania Mordecai was a respected citizen. I am very much pleased to have the information, and if I should ever have a revision of my book, you may be sure that this will go in.

The circular concerning your "Indian Chiefs of Pennsylvania" sounds very interesting. I am passing it on to a friend of mine interested in the Indians, and I hope he will send you an order. I would do it myself if my budget for books that I must have was not always straining my resources. Perhaps some day it will be larger.

With congratulations on the success that your book is having, believe me

Very sincerely yours
