

Hauser:

One of the books that Hauser catalogues under the title of Humor in his pamphlet is Baldwin's, Flush Times of Alabama. The particular story which he repeatedly read aloud concerns an earthquake. The copy, so Hauser said, that Lincoln carried is in Horner's collection in Chicago.

Hauser gives a list of the books that Mr. Lincoln is supposed to have read - funny books, supposed to have read in the White House.

For Hauser's further list see Page 24.

Miss <sup>Cushman Brown</sup> ~~Christian~~ of ~~St. John's~~ University lists <sup>books</sup> in Lincoln's studied, Halpine, Life and Adventures - Joe Miller's, Jest Book - Quinn's Jests

Dick & Fitzgerald who published the book of One Thousand Comical Stories which was in Father's library, copy. 1859, in the list of their publications printed in the back of this book have several funny books. The Fortunes of Hector O'Halloran; and, His Man Mark Anthony O'Toole. Broad Grins of the Laughing Philosopher - a collection by Pickle the Younger. Another, The Plate of Chowder; A Dish for Funny Fellows, by the author of Mrs. Partington's Carpet-Bag of Fun. Another