

Ida M. Tarbell
120 E. 19 Street

A Hunt for a Grave

I was at Freehold, N.J., and had had no success in finding any trace of the Lincolns in Monmouth County, beyond a few documents, - no trace of the home or the industries that they carried on there. The only thing outside of the documents that I was assured existed was the grave of little Deborah Lincoln, the child of Mordecai, who had come to New Jersey from New England.

I set out to find this grave, which I was told was near a place called Covell's Hill. On my trip, I also wanted to find, if possible, the remnants of a forge which Applegate, an editor at Freehold, assured me he had himself seen.