ALLEGHENY COLLEGE,
MEADVILLE, PA.
To the Faculty, Students and Friends of Allegheny College,

Greeting:

THE KALDRON makes its bow for the ninth time, and hopes sincerely that you may be pleased with it.

We, on whose shoulders has fallen the burden of editing it, wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to many persons who have done much to make this number what it is.

We hope that no one will take offence at anything in the department devoted to personal notices. All of these are intended merely as jokes, and if you can’t take a joke as it is intended, the sooner you add that to your list of accomplishments, the better.

In fact, the whole book is edited for friends, and looks for nothing but friendly criticism.

These remarks apply only to those students of this College who have bought copies of the Kaldron. If you depend on borrowing a copy you would much better give up the idea, for you will be insulted before you have read it half through.

HISTORY.

To write a history of the Senior Class seems an almost unnecessary task, for so well has it been done by present historians—a task it is, indeed, for so prone are we to overestimate our importance and point to one "little corner" in chapel and exclaim, "Behold the supremus of college classes!" But to write a history without bias is almost an impossibility, and especially is this true when it is written within a few years of its occurrence. After having considered, then, the unsurmountable difficulties which stand in the way of the present historian let us review, briefly, the most important events in the career of '98.

Well do we remember when we entered old Allegheny on that beautiful September day when nature dressed in her garb of variegated colors smiled upon us and seemed to encourage us in our new adventure. It was an auspicious day, and to us the omens appeared favorable. All went well, and after the usual amount of "red tape" had been unwound we were admitted to classes and started on our four years' course. Wearily we plodded through the Freshman year with nothing to mar our happiness save an occasional "scrap" with our superior Soph. But so well have the glorious victories and brilliant achievements of our first three years been described in former histories that I will pass on and come to the point in our history in which we are all interested—the Senior year.

As is generally the case, at the beginning of the Fall term, the first important event was the class election in which more enthusiasm was manifested than ever before. The political forces were almost evenly matched and the battle was vigorously contested. If this election is any indication of the future of some members of the class—especially the ladies—we predict for them a brilliant success in the field of politics. Hardly had elections passed when we were met with the announcement that twelve of our number would have the privilege of charming the audience on Commencement Day. Would that Demosthenes and Cicero might be present to behold the magnificent and stately Senior as he mounts the platform and begins to pour a volley of words into the innocent crowd. No doubt Allegheny will never again have the opportunity to hear such oratory as the voluminous orators of '98 will send forth.

Now our course is almost run. It seems but yesterday when we looked in each other's faces in front of Bentley Hall, but in reality it has been four years. Our past career in all departments has been brilliant, and it is with pride that we look back over our past history. Our course has been pleasant, and to each one we extend the hand of fellowship, and especially to our professors who have been so patient with us in our work. As a parting farewell let us give three cheers for our Alma Mater. May we never be a discredit to her good name, and may she live long and prosper.

HISTORY.

THE Class of '99 with a bow presents for the public perusal the third chapter of her illustrious history.

The previous chapters long ago came from the pens of authors of great historical ability. So arduous has been the task, however, that they have become exhausted by the strain and have retired to private life again. The task of writing the history of '99 as Juniors has been assigned to the writer, and he will follow the precedent established by his predecessors as soon as his work is completed.

A great historian once said, "The junior year occupies that happy calm between the great unrest of life and the boisterousness of early college days." No class has ever performed the duties of the junior year so faithfully as the Class of '99. If you doubt our ability and industry go and ask the members of the Faculty about the Junior and they will vote unanimously that "never man spoke like this man."

And now it becomes my duty to defend '99 from a base calumny which has been spread by our enemies. They point with scorn to the fact that in a year the class has been diminished two-thirds in membership. They give as the cause of this many reasons which are derogatory to the class. But their minds are not able to cope with great problems, and it is not surprising that they err greatly. Aye, the class has diminished, but in the present membership is shown another example of the universal rule of the "survival of the fittest," and we proclaim that we now stand before the public a class composed of the best material only. And with this boast the class retires to prepare for "positively the last appearance."

HISTORY.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

The poet in this immortal verse has beautifully expressed the true value and meaning of history. It is to this end we record our deeds and make our "footprints on the sands of time, that some 'forlorn and shipwrecked' Freshman, 'seeing shall take heart again.'" The Class of the Century will leave indelible footprints that neither the storms nor the ravages of time can wipe away; the year 1900 will close an epoch in the history of "Old Alleghe" that she can never forget.

We came, we saw, (?) we conquered. We came without noise or ostentation; we saw without wonder or astonishment; we conquered without effort or exertion. Everyone knows the lamentable condition of the college before our coming. Notice the change that has taken place since. The "Prep."

"no longer applauds the morning prayer; the Freshman has learned at last that a necktie is a piece of wearing apparel that must be worn somewhere between the clavicle and the place "where Mary wore her beads," and not around the chin in close embrace with one's "inferior maxillary." To-day the student does not wear that "soul-jagging," pathetic, half-starved, "lean and hungry look" he was wont to wear. Who now rides the "jaded mare" to an early grave? Not a student in the school. Through our noble example and influence a "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Professors" has been established, and such atrocities are unknown. Bringing with us all the culture and grace of an advanced civilization, we started another
Renaissance, another reform, the like of which we hope this ancient institution will never need again. We "touched the lifeless corpse of 'college athletics' and it sprang to its feet;" we "struck the rock of 'college spirit' and abundant streams of enthusiasm 'gushed forth.'" So much for our civilizing influence, now for our illustrious deeds.

As Freshmen, we vanquished the unwarlike, peace-loving Sophs with a single look. Too much absorbed with internal troubles of their own and under a pretense of standing upon the plane of high moral rectitude, they refused to give us battle and with the meekness of sheep (or rather lambs), they left the field without striking a blow. To use a vulgar but expressive phrase, they were "dead easy."

The impudence of the '01 "Fresh." was pathetic and at the same time amusing. One bright, cheerful day in autumn during chapel time, our lusty president, with an inspiration of Sophomore enthusiasm, placed our standard upon the lofty summit of an electric light pole in front of Bentley Hall. When the verdant Freshman beheld our standard bold, he spurted forth great gushes of puerile rage. "By the shade of Hercules!" quoth he, "your rag to-day we must tear down!" Death before dishonor! We Sophs broke out all over our faces in amused astonishment. The rustic horde began to form in battle array. They did look "real fierce," soldiers everyone of them (a la Battalion of Coxey). Crowds of fair maidens from Hulings Hall and many other spectators began to gather on the hills around the prospective battle-field. The sun disappeared behind a mass of dark sinister looking clouds; all was still save the rustling of the autumnal winds through the dishevelled hair of the frenzied Freshmen. We Sophs, with the grace and "sang froid" of "vets," calmly walked to our post beneath our defiant flag and awaited developments. Suddenly the Freshman line began to move. On, on, they came! Bump! they struck our line! Bump! boom! they were hurled back with a velocity that almost sent them clear through Bentley Hall. They rallied.

They charged, and rallied and charged again. But all in vain! That phalanx of Sophomoric chivalry could not be broken. The slaughter of the ill-fated Freshmen was terrible. Some of them began to call for mother, others for "schooners" of Sophomore blood. At last in sheer desperation they attempted to scale our pole by strategy. One saucy, intrepid "Fresh" donned a pair of wireman's climbers and swore he would ascend the staff. Our leader grinned and "winked his other eye." They made another charge, still more fierce than all the rest. O, what a sad charge they made! Just as they reached us, our ranks parted. Some dashed their scanty brains out against our pole, others were hurled out into space. Their bodies were afterwards found floating around in the sewer running through the campus ravine. The "youth" with the climbers got mixed in the "shuffle" and had his trousers wounded so seriously that another brave had to volunteer to ascend the staff. With the small remnant of their forces they tried their luck again, and by some kind of "horse luck" the aspiring "Fresh" got started up the pole. He didn't go far before twenty hungry claws seized upon his wearing apparel, and oh, how he did drop! The earth trembled for miles around. This last blow almost killed poor Fresh, and caused panic and rout among the ranks of the infantile warriors. Their fate was writ. The flame of "Fresh" heroism that had burned so vigorously a short time before, now went out in blood, beneath the pitiless rain of Sophomoric salt, and the "Freshest of the Fresh" had fought his last fight. "Cured" Freshmen may be had at the college "smokehouse," at very low rates. Call early at the college office or at the bookstore and secure choice pork. Eating clubs furnished at reduced rates. Alas! poor Freshmen! Farewell! till we meet again.

HISTORIAN.
Juniors.

It is with fear and trembling that the writer tackles this subject. Truly did last year’s historian of the class of ‘99 write that “No pen, except that perhaps of a Bancroft or a Macaulay, could chronicle with justice to ‘99, her short history. But why not leave the job to Dante or R. Pelasco Drant, they both wrote of Hell, and did pretty fair work.” However, an outline may be in order here.

Their Freshman year consisted of defeat after defeat which we dare not write, it might be too much for the country boys and girls at home if they were to read about the hard times that their brothers and sisters in the Junior class had when they first entered college.

Their Sophomore history might well be divided into two parts, one part for each faction—yet over all in red! letters we will write D-E-F-E-A-T.

But their Junior year. First, all the respectable members either kept their Sophomore seating of last year or became Seniors. Then they were compelled to witness the ignoble defeats of their partners, the Class of “Nothing Won.”

The blow that almost killed father, however, was the defeat at the Parish House, April 26, when the Seniors and Sophomores had that banquet. Gad, there wasn’t a plume left on those poor Juniors the next day. Not one of them dared raise his eyes except in prayer to heaven for safety. It cost them $2.00 each to get those bunglesome Freshmen out of the care of the city bluecoats, and they didn’t get anything to eat, either.

Shall I go on with a little prophecy? No, it isn’t necessary. They are dwindling down until there are only a few left, and heaven only knows what their end will be.

A SOPHOMORE.

* Letters were written to each of these gentlemen by the Editors, but Mr. Dante’s letter was received from the Dead Letter office, and Mr. Drant would not tackle the job—said it would kill him.

! We wanted contrast so we use the complement of green.

HISTORY.

THE Class of 1901 was organized during a period which marks many important events in the annals of American history. During its brief existence have occurred the culminating events in the Cuban Revolution, that noble struggle of a down-trodden people who have dedicated themselves to the cause of freedom.

Such periods are crucial. They reveal the dominant characteristics of the individual, the organization, and the nation. In the test which national peril has produced, our class has proved to be representative of true loyalty, sincere devotion, and admirable courage. Among our number are patriots who have already answered the nation’s call, bravely following the stars and stripes, contending in a righteous cause. We have observed in general toward our class organization those relations which the citizen bears to his country. As individuals, we desire a worthy record for the class of which we are an integral part. Our class spirit has been manifested. Our loyalty is conceded, our courage is evident. Those who calmly assumed the seats of honor delegated to the Freshmen during one of the first chapel exercises of the present college year knew intuitively that sooner or later they must meet the wily Sophomores in battle array; yet no one shrunk from the responsibility, and not one asked for a furlough. If war with our sister class was inevitable, we were prepared to defend our reputation and our colors in open, honorable battle.

Our superior strength and high ideals of the modes in which modern warfare should be conducted made us, perhaps, too unsuspecting. This gave to the Sophomores an opportunity to display their cowardice and lack of confidence, by adopting unworthy methods of campaign. Disregarding precedent and the honor of their class, they placed their colors upon the top of the electric light pole in front of Bentley Hall, a place practically inaccessible under any circumstances. This did not permit of an equal struggle on the memorable day of our class rush. But

"The heights to which the Sophomores crept
Were not attained by honest fight;
For they, while lengthy chapel kept,
By craft gained what they lacked in might."

During the progress of the fight,

"Full many a Soph, unwilling though he seemed,
Was given to the Freshmen’s tender care.
Full many a verdant sharer of his fate was borne,
Resisting, o’er the campus fair."

Hostilities did not cease until one of our leaders had been severely injured by an accident. The college may well be proud of the temper of our mettle.

Our class contains representatives from various sections of territory. The Keystone State, however, leads in numbers. Though of various temperaments and degrees of ability, we are a unit in defending our rights. Sectional feeling seems largely obliterated, and the hope is entertained that we may establish a precedent for other classes by supporting unitedly the interests of our class and our college, with no spirit of selfishness to influence our motives or determine our attitude on local issues.

The greater part of our college life is still before us. It is destined to cover the crowning period of the present decade, which bridges with its span the stream of time, over which we must pass to the Twentieth Century’s shore. Ours is a time of boundless opportunity. Some of us will attain worldly honors. Though the world owes us all a living, we will demonstrate our ability in collecting it. Looking upon the examples of some of the upper class men, we may be warned that

"Lives of self-great men remind us,
We can make our lives a crime;
And, departing, leave behind us,
Not one solitary dime."
Already the dawn of the Twentieth Century is blushing along the horizon of time; and we trust that as we are merged into its brighter light, with advanced civilization and wider diffusion of knowledge, around our lives shall crystallize the beautiful diamond of Character, and around our mental conceptions gems of thought resplendent from the beams of boundless Truth.

From Jefferson Gazette.
The Allegheny Glee Club Concert.
Positively the best musical entertainment ever presented in Jefferson was given at the opera house last week Friday evening by the members of the Allegheny College Glee Club, assisted by Miss Spalding, reader.
The audience numbered about one hundred and seventy-five persons. It was an extremely critical one. The first number rendered by the Glee Club was a delightful surprise as, to speak very frankly, no one expected to hear such music. The voices blended perfectly, and, considering this is the club's first year, it is a very great compliment to say they are equal, if not superior, to Sherrill College Glee Club, which holds a well earned, national reputation.
After the concert the Crowell-Hills hall was opened and a reception given the club. The boys made many friends in Jefferson. Allegheny college authorities can do no more profitable advertising for the institution than to give this excellent musical organization their warmest support.
The following was the program as rendered:
Reylof ............................................The Foresters
Plinton ........................................."I Love but Thee"
Brewer ...........................................A Sensible Serenade
Richard H. Davis, Miss Spalding.  Her First Appearance
Kullak, Mr. Wright.  Octave Study in F Flat

We are fortunate in being able to present a cut of the five students who left college April 27, 1898, with Company B, Fifteenth Regiment, N. G. P., in response to the President's call for volunteers.

To Our Soldier Boys.

Sometimes the path of duty stretches fair
Through verdant fields, o'er flower-enameled sod;
Sometimes o'er rugged rocks and thorny ways—
The testing place of God.

O, well for him who goes at duty's call,
Amid the pleasant, flowery fields to stray;
But greater far is he who does not fear
To walk that sterner way.

From east, from west, from north, from south they come,
Young heroes trooping at Columbia's call;
And some will live to tell of battles won,
And some, alas, must fall.

But none will live to fill a traitor's grave;
Such heroes die, they know not how to yield;
They come as victors from the battle's strife
Or come upon their shield.

All honor be to those who bare their breasts
To hostile bullets on the field of Mars;
Their fame will echo through the vaulted sky,
Beyond the farthest stars.

And honor be to Allegheny's sons
Who marched away with loyal hearts and true;
In loving memory their names shall stand,
Beneath the gold and blue.

Constitution Allegheny College Athletic Association.

We, the student body of Allegheny College, realizing the deplorable state into which our athletics have fallen and believing this condition can be bettered by our combined support of a strong athletic organization, have organized this Athletic Association.

ARTICLE I.

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be the "Allegheny College Athletic Association."

Section 2. The purpose of this Association shall be the elevation of Allegheny College athletics to a standard of equality with other high grade institutions of her class.

ARTICLE II.

Section 1. All students of the Collegiate and Preparatory Departments of Allegheny College shall be eligible to membership in this Association.

Section 2. All students eligible to membership shall be admitted to all privileges of the organization on payment of an annual fee of seventy-five cents (75c), payable one-third at the beginning of each term.

ARTICLE III.

Section 1. The officers of this Association shall be a President and a Secretary and Treasurer (the latter combined in one office).

Section 2. Subject to the choice and election of this Association shall also be the following officers: Manager of the foot ball team, manager of the base ball team, manager of the men's basket ball team, manager of the ladies' basket ball team, manager of the track team and delegate-at-large from the Association to the Athletic Advisory Board.

Section 3. Members of the Association who have paid the required term fee at least forty-eight (48) hours previous to election, shall have the right to vote and are eligible to office.

ARTICLE IV.

Section 1. This Association shall meet regularly twice per year. Once on Saturday of the third week of the Fall Term and again on Saturday of the third week of the Spring Term.

Section 2. Special meetings may be called at the request of any member of the Advisory Board.

ARTICLE V.

Section 1. The officers of this Association and other officers subject to its election shall be chosen as follows:

Section 2. The President, the Secretary and Treasurer and the Delegate from the Athletic Association to the Athletic Advisory Board shall be elected Saturday of the third week of the Fall Term from the whole number of nominations made by members of the Athletic Association.

Section 3. The manager of the base ball team, manager of the track team, manager of the men's basket ball team, and manager of the ladies' basket ball team shall be elected Saturday of the third week of the Fall Term, in the following manner: From the whole number of nominations presented for each office, the Athletic Board shall select two persons who shall be the official nominees for said office and shall be elected according to Article VI, Section 2.

Section 4. The manager of the foot ball team shall be elected on Saturday of the third week of the Spring Term from nominees selected according to the provisions for nominations of team managers contained in Article V, Section 3.

Section 5. A member of the Association playing on any regular college team shall be disqualified from service on the Athletic Board.

ARTICLE VI.

Section 1. It shall be the duty of the President to take charge of all meetings of the Association and assume the usual role of a presiding officer.
Section 2. It shall be the duty of the manager of the base ball team to perform the managerial functions of his office under the advice of the Athletic Board, and act as a member of said board during the Spring Term.

Section 3. It shall be required of the manager of the foot ball team to perform his duties under the supervision of the Athletic Board and constitute himself a member of this board during the Fall Term.

Section 4. The duties of the managers of the ladies' and men's basket ball teams shall be to act as advised by the Athletic Board, the manager of the latter team to fill a place on this board during the Winter Term.

Section 5. It shall be the duty of the manager of the track team to look after the organization and financial welfare of his team and arrange for the annual field day.

ARTICLE VII.

Section 1. We commend the services of the Athletic Advisory Board and urge its continuance as at present constituted.

ARTICLE VIII.

Section 1. The captains of athletic teams shall be elected by the members of their respective teams who have played one regular game or its equivalent on the team.

Section 2. Such election shall take place at the last meeting of the team preceding disbandment.

Section 3. Members of athletic teams are subject to the approval of the Athletic Advisory Board.

ARTICLE IX.

Any student who by his athletic ability has attained a proficiency sufficient to play at least one regular game or its equivalent on either the foot ball, basket ball or base ball teams, or attains a certain record in track athletics, to be hereafter established by the Athletic Board, shall be privileged to wear the honorary "A" as a reward of athletic merit.

ARTICLE X.

Section 1. An annual field day shall be held on Monday of Commencement week.

ARTICLE XI.

Section 1. In all meetings of the Athletic Association a majority shall constitute a quorum.

Section 2. In all elections of the Association voting shall be done by ballot and the candidate receiving the largest number of votes will be duly elected.

ARTICLE XII.

Section 1. Amendments may be made to this constitution by a two-thirds vote of those present at any meeting of the Association two weeks previously announced.

As the Manager Sees It.

For years Allegheny has been struggling to place her athletics upon a firm and stable basis. Team after team, manager after manager, captain after captain, has appeared, performed and passed on to oblivion, and still the proud name of Allegheny was never written on the victorious banners of Inter-collegiate sport.

The opening of last fall term will be historic if for no other reason than because at that time was conceived and executed a plan to bring order out of chaos. First, a definite and substantial Athletic Association was required. Second, factionalism must be ended. Third, some responsibility must be placed upon the managers.

Following this lead, the basket ball team did good work and, best of all, it securely fixed a firm foundation for future teams. The base ball team is still in its infancy and what can be said almost belongs to the realm of prophecy. However, an extended ball trip has been taken, covering more than a thousand miles. In all, seven colleges were visited, and if Allegheny is not a name to be feared it certainly is dreaded. Other trips have been made but it is doubtful if this one of '98 will ever be equaled. Returning home, the team expected, and of right ought to have received the hearty and full support of the student body. Truly that old proverb, "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," has never better proven its right to credence. The support has been of the merest mention and if during the remainder of the term some slight appreciation is not shown for the efforts put forth by those on the team, it will only be an idiot or a fool who will again take the reins in matters of base ball.

"The Year."

The grind-organ on the Conservatory corner started up once more on the 6th of September. Grind-organ, did we say? That would never do, though the jumble of sounds heard on coming up Chestnut Street does sound exceedingly like one. No, indeed! for then the pupils would in turn have to act the role of that necessary accessory of a grind-organ, and would it be possible to connect in our minds, with a grind-organ, those tall, dark maidens, graceful, bewitching blondes, or any sort of maidens dark or fair, who will in time become "sweet girl graduates?" The comparison is bad, so in plain catalogue style, we state that the attendance during the year '98, has been remarkably good.

There have been more than the usual number of pupils' recitals, those affairs which appear to the beginner to be the tribunal before which she is brought to be either condemned or acquitted, and the opinion passed by that motley throng, she feels, may perhaps condemn her forever. She is "so scared" and "all of a tremble." Poor soul! the agony she undergoes in her first appearance, is as real as any she will ever experience. But for all that those recitals are a splendid opportunity for the pupils to accustom themselves to appearing before an audience.

One other fine opportunity which the pupils have had this year and one which has not been previously enjoyed, has been the series of lecture recitals given by the teachers.

We have been very fortunate this year in having with us Miss Haywood. She has been especially enjoyed in the Theory Class, where, though "a daughter of the gods, divinely tall," she has stooped to the guidance of youthful enthusiasm (?). Among the social events of the season the most delightful has been the series of receptions given (in prospective) to the pupils, the sample of which was thoroughly appreciated by all.

The school days are drawing to a close and those who are about to leave, look back with pleasure over the time spent in Meadville, and will always feel a thrill of pride at the sight of the Green and White.
IN the due course of events the Conservatory, with true motherly instinct, is about to shove another brood of fledglings out of the old nest. The aforesaid nest has not been overcrowded this year, but owing to the propensity of young birds to possess large heads and copious mouths, it has been comfortably filled with the half-dozen prodigies who are about to take their flight into a world of greedy cats and dogs. It is to be hoped that they will profit by the maternal warnings and admonitions, and soar far above the dangers which threaten in the vicinity of the ground.

It is safe to say that since the "Class of '98" began its career, the girls have practiced so diligently and under such superior instruction that their advent into the outer world will be a new era in musical circles. Their past experience has been merely one of labor, which would prove a tedious record; but with such undeniable talents and bright prospects for the future, they will undoubtedly make for themselves a creditable history.

Miss Maude M. Lupher and Miss May Belle Benninghoff, both of Meadville, are the only piano graduates, a number which is unusually small, the other four being pupils in voice, Misses Cora B. Brown, of Greenville, Elsie Kiefer, of Pittsburg, M. Alta Moyer and Nelle Blystone, of Meadville.

Should you ask me whence these groanings,
Whence these wailings and these moanings,
Like the nightly cry of witches,
Like the nightly cry of witches;
With their daily repetition
And their hollow-chested echoes?

I should answer, I should tell you,
From the fair throats of the Glee Club,
From the omnipresent soprano,
From the ever tinkling piano,
From the long-famed, haunted organ room,
Where a woman did herself kill—
From the den of Smiling Oscar,
The musician, the sweet singer,
That is where they all do come from.

On the following pages we introduce to you a few of Allegheny's boys and girls. Some of them you may know. If you have kept up with the times you have probably heard of all of them. Their lives and their work are an open book. We are so proud of them that from year to year the KALIDRON intends to make mention of others of whom we are as justly proud.
Pittsburg, May 9, 1898.

Editor of the KALDRON,
Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa.:

I send you the picture you ask for. It is of an old man. There are many instances of events and persons that transpired there that are still pleasant to think of. I am in great hopes the young men going out from the college will be a credit to themselves and our great country.

I am, yours truly,

F. H. PIERPONT.

Francis H. Pierpont, '39, was born in Monongahela County, Va., (now West Virginia,) in 1815. When twenty-two years old he entered Allegheny College, with Dr. Ruter, Dr. H. J. Clark and Bishop Simpson were among his instructors. After his graduation he taught school and read law for three years and began to practice in Fairmont, W. Va., in 1842. He took an active part in the political discussions of the times. He was intensely opposed to slavery and secession.

At a convention assembled at Wheeling, West Va., June 11, 1861, for the purpose of organizing a state government under the secession, Mr. Pierpont was almost unanimously elected Governor of the State by the forty counties represented. He held office under this election for about twelve months, and in the meantime was elected by the people to fill an unexpired term of two years. He was re-elected by the loyal people of the State for four years and received recognition by the President as Governor of Virginia. At his request a convention met which by vote abolished slavery from the State in 1864.

He always made it a matter of conscience to appoint no man to office without moral and intellectual qualifications for the place. A part of his record is that during the seven years of official position, amid the degeneracy of the war, there never was a suspicion of the misappropriation of one dollar of the public money. As one of the great war governors he will never be forgotten. Bishop Simpson repeatedly said that by Governor Pierpont and Rev. Gordon Battelle, West Virginia was saved from uniting her destiny with the South in the great struggle.

At present Mr. Pierpont is in comparatively good health. He resides with a married daughter in Pittsburg.
Mr. F. G. Moorhead, Meadville, Pa.:

My Dear Sir—Yours of the 23d received and should have had earlier response but for absence from the city and press of business.

Regret exceedingly my inability at this time to give you the sketch desired, but after my health is fully restored I will write up my impressions of Allegheny College during my attendance there in ’49-’51. I take pleasure in enclosing my photograph.

Assuring you that my recollections of "Old Allegheny" are deeply impressed in my memory, and of the most pleasant character, I remain,

Yours very sincerely,

Jas. A. Gary.

On the first day of April, absit omen, I received a letter which bore on the upper left hand corner of the envelope a notice, "In five days return to the Kaldron." There was a certain uncanny look about it which put me "into hot water" at once. I found the inside of the letter, however, so friendly in its tone and signed by such a well known name, and awakening in my mind so many pleasing memories of old Allegheny days, that I soon decided to respond to the invitation which the letter conveyed.

But about this formidable looking word Kaldron, that is not the way in which we used to spell it in my day away back in ’52, but times have changed and why should spelling be immutable? I have lying now upon my table more than one letter addressed to me at "Robert College" by some provincial correspond, and I see frequent notices of a certain popular klub; besides I number among my personal friends so many Kleomenes and Konstantines, as well as Kleanthas and Kleopatras, that the kappa no longer offends my critical eye. At any rate the spelling of a kettle is a question quite secondary to that of the contents of the kettle, and if we are to get something good out of the kettle we must first put something good into it. Allow me then to express the confident hope that this KALDRON will never contain the bubbling broth of magic spells like those
"Wrought by the sisters of the Danish King
At midnight's blackest hour," and concocted from bitter and venomous herbs causing heart burnings and strife in all who partake of the same.
May it also not be used as was the noted kaldron in which the daughters of the old King Pelias, cheated by the vengeful Medea, boiled up their aged father in the vain hope of rejuvenating him. The overpowering, killing, cutting up and boiling of the old man was easily and successfully accomplished, but in spite of all their incantations the getting a young man out of that kaldron proved a most disastrous failure, just the kind of failure which attends the destructive experiments of so many so-called reformers in their attempts to keep up with what they are pleased to call the progressive spirit of the age.
In an old Babylonian legend, as given upon the clay tablets in the cuneiform writing, the plain workingman Isullann is called by the crafty goddess, Queen Ishtar, to come and partake of "the cooked herbs" which have been boiled in her magic kettle. He replies, "What my mother does not cook that do I not eat."
I have something of the same feeling toward our venerated Alma Mater. The experience of years has confirmed me in the belief that the mental food which was then and which is now served by her is of the right kind, and I should be very suspicious of anything offered me which to sight, smell or taste bore evidence of not being her kind of food. What the mother would not cook I would most certainly refuse to eat.
I conclude, then, by expressing the hope that whatever in due season is served from this KALDRON may be of that same savory and nutritious character as the food which our Alma Mater has always cooked for her children, and nourished upon which they have become strong for the duties and the conflicts of life. Let it be spiced and seasoned to a cultivated taste and well seasoned with "Attic salt," and then served hot—but not too hot.

ALBERT LONG.

Robert College, Constantinople, April 4, 1898.

I left Allegheny College forty-one years ago, little dreaming of the scenes and events which awaited me in this big, wide world. When two years later I turned my face toward India, I little knew what I was doing. Two great overshadowing facts seemed to shut out everything else. First, that I was leaving my native land probably to return to it no more; and second, that I was going to an unknown region to lead somewhat of a hermit life amid strange scenes and an alien people. It is needless to say now that I was too ignorant of all that pertained to the Eastern world, or perhaps too short-sighted to appreciate the fact that there had fallen to me a rich heritage, and that of the many students who had gone forth from the same classic halls, I had been highly favored among many—indeed, I am tempted to say above all—in having a most inviting career open to me in one of the most interesting portions of the globe. When I landed in India I fully expected to spend my days in a small district near the source, of the Ganges, among a comparatively rude people, and with but slight association with Europeans. But as years passed by our field widened, railways began to make the most remote places accessible, steamers began to frequent all our coasts, and thus it has come to pass that I am now entrusted with duties which pertain not to one district, or to one empire, but to a vast region to which we apply the term Southern Asia.

Within this immense region live above three hundred and fifty millions of the human race, and among these teeming millions our workers of various races are preaching in twenty-four languages. When this statement is made, little need be added. If any living man does not consider such a field wide enough, or such a mass of humanity interesting enough to absorb all the best energies of one individual, then I must say that the objector is in every sense of the word a person hard to please.

This slow and sluggish old Eastern world has points of interest which are all its own. The people are awakening out of the slumber of uncounted centuries; social problems of many kinds call for solution; education here assumes phases which are unknown in occidental countries; a new literature is to be created among a people whose ancestors were chanting polished hymns in the age in which David and Solomon were writing the psalmody of Israel. Here we are, placed face to face with all the most active agencies of Europe, and at the same time seem to live and move in the world of three thousand years ago.

So far as my own personal interests are concerned, I wish simply to say that I have always been persuaded that my college associations rendered me invaluable service in preparing for the life of active duty which has fallen to my lot. Other institutions might have offered in various ways greater advantages, but Allegheny College, beyond the average college of the United States, was pervaded by a spirit of practical earnestness, of robust and independent thought, and with just enough of the spirit of rivalry to stimulate the students to put forth their best efforts. As Dr. Barker used to impress upon us, we were not at college to learn certain things, but rather to learn how to study.

In my case college life has continued all through these years. I have had to study the old and the new, and, if I could find the leisure, would devote myself to close and systematic study as diligently as I did in the good old days of the fifties.

With special love and greetings to the survivors of my hallowed college days—not excepting the men of to-day—and with good wishes, hopes and prayers for the best interests of the dear old college, I remain, as ever, a loyal son and steadfast friend of old Allegheny.

J. M. THOBURN.

General William McKinley Osborne, whose prominence in the Presidential campaign of 1896, and whose appointment to the post of Consul-General of the United States at London, have made his name familiar on two Continents, obtained his collegiate education at Allegheny College. He was born in Girard, Trumbull County, Ohio, April 26, 1842. His early education was obtained at the academy at Poland, Ohio. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted in the 23d Ohio Volunteers, the first three years regiment formed in the State. Because of injuries received he was not able to serve out his full term. In the Fall of 1862 he entered the law office of Messrs. Sutliff, Tuttle & Stull, at Warren, Ohio, where he studied for a year and then took a course at the law school of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. In 1869 he began the practice of law at Youngstown, Ohio, and was held in such esteem by his fellow-citizens that he was twice elected Mayor, 1874-5. In 1880 he removed to Boston, Mass., and soon after entered politics in which he was quickly successful, being elected to represent Ward 21 in the City Council in 1884 and 1885. In the latter year Governor Robinson, recognizing his fine executive ability, appointed him a member of the new Board of Police for the City of Boston, which had just been created by Act of the Legislature. He was re-appointed by Governor Ames in 1888 and served until 1893.

General Osborne is a cousin of President William McKinley and the warm personal attachment formed in their boyhood days in Ohio has continued to the present time. General Osborne’s faith in the ascendency of the guiding star of his distinguished cousin has never been shaken. He frequently asserted that Mr. McKinley, by his course in Congress and as Governor of Ohio, would some day be President of the United States, and the fact that the latter now holds that great office is due in no small measure to General Osborne’s efforts. Early in 1895 Mr. Osborne developed a sentiment in favor of Mr. McKinley throughout the South, which soon after resulted in securing for him an almost solid delegation to the National Republican Convention, and this feeling rapidly spread to all parts of the country before the Convention met. In recognition of his ability and judgment General Osborne was elected Secretary of the National Republican Committee, and was one of the foremost leaders in waging the stirring campaign which resulted in Mr. McKinley’s election. One of President McKinley’s first acts was the appointment of Mr. Osborne to be Consul-General to London, and the latter sailed for his post in May, 1897.

General Osborne is very fond of travel and has varied and enlarged his experience by sojourns in Europe covering several years. He was married in Boston, April 24, 1876, to Frances Clara, adopted daughter of Walter Hastings. Of this union four girls and one boy were born.

pertinent to its history, yet of forgotten origin and meaning. My friend stumbled in his researches on many inscriptions, many strange objects which puzzled him seriously. As I watched his work, my mind went back to Allegheny, and I wondered what a historian who might undertake, in say the year 3000, to write the history of the University of Allegheny (let us hope it will be) would make of a certain good-sized stone engraved with a short inscription and a date and lying snugly on the grass plot between Bentley and Ruter Halls. As I have a personal interest in that stone it rather pained me to think that the historian of the year 3000 would probably be unable to make anything of all of the stone, and that he would label it "origin unknown," or pass it by unnoticed. So when the KALDRON asked me some weeks ago for a few hundred words on any subject which pleased me, I seized the opportunity eagerly. I would tell what I remember of that stone, the KALDRON would publish it, the historian of the future would certainly consult the KALDRON, and so the stone would be saved from oblivion.

Notice that I said I would tell what I remember; that is, I propose to write my reminiscences of the stone, not its history—a very different thing, as any historian knows—usually to his sorrow.

My reminiscences of the stone begin in the early Spring of 1877 (21 years ago!) It may have been because it was Spring, or because we were Sophomores, or because we hoped soon to be Juniors that we, i.e., the class of '80, were seized with a desire to distinguish ourselves. As no opportunity offered we concluded after much thought to erect a monument to ourselves. The decision taken, a much more difficult matter came up. What kind of a monument should we erect? We were poor, every one of us. We couldn't put up a gymnasium, or erect a statue, or endow a chair. We might put up a tablet to be sure, but we seemed to have very little to say on a tablet. After many meetings after chapel (Christian Ethics came that bell and a class meeting is such an excellent excuse for cutting the first ten minutes!) somebody suggested a stone. The idea appealed to us. Stones are cheap on the hills of Crawford county—to be had for the hauling, in fact. We would have a stone and engrave on it a class motto and a date. A stone committee was appointed with alacrity. As I represented the young women of the class on the committee I speak with authority when I say that the stone committee did its duty—not with alacrity, but certainly with fidelity. I think we had a picnic on every hillside and in every valley around Meadville in our efforts to find a proper bowlder. It was May, and who can blame us if we were in no hurry to decide?

We did decide at last, however. I do not remember why we took the one we did, where we got it, nor how we got it to the campus. I believe, in fact, that the last matter was managed by a committee on transportation, which succeeded us. At all events the stone was successfully placed on the spot selected for it, and I suppose appropriate ceremonies were held over it. Of that, however, I am not certain. If we did hold a celebration, as of course we ought to have done, my impression of it was entirely destroyed by an exciting event which came close on the heels of the celebration. In our elation at having achieved a monument—even if it were a monument which recorded no deed—we had not reckoned with the natural and omnipresent enemy of the Sophomore—the Freshman. Our stone was so imposing that it seemed to us it would paralyze Freshman ingenuity and malice, and that they would never be able to do more than perhaps to whitewash it. We were rudely awakened from our sense of security. One morning when I came to chapel I found most of my classmates missing, and those who remained looked dismal. It was soon whispered to me that our noble stone was in the ravine—rolled over by Freshman hands.

It is an easy matter to roll a stone down hill, once started. Getting it back is, however, quite another trick. It was this trick which we must perform. Our most fluent orators were dumb and our wiliest politicians quiet when they faced the situation. Now in our number was a silent and studious man who had made something of a record for himself as a mechanic, and who,
as a matter of fact, was putting himself through college with money earned at his trade. He had never made any speeches, as I remember, on the glory the stone would bring us nor had he served on the stone committee. But he came to our rescue now as we sat staring at each other in dumb hopelessness. In a few words he explained how stones can be raised up precipices. His explanation was greeted with applause, and he was appointed in short order to take charge of the rescuing party.

Two days later the stone reappeared on the campus. For the rest of the term, happily but a few days, the Sophomores armed with rifles concealed themselves nightly in one of the rooms of Bentley Hall overlooking the stone. If a Freshman approached he was warned away and he invariably retired at once when he saw the Sophomore batteries turned on him.

I think it must have been after the stone was in place that the inscription which it bears, Spes Sibi Quisque, Class of 1880, was cut upon it. My only recollection of the legend concerns the choice of the motto, a task which fell to the stone committee. I remember that assembled in the library of Culver Hall, surrounded by anthologies and books of quotations, we hunted phrases diligently until we brought down the one on the stone. I wish I could say that the only point we considered in making our choice was securing a stimulating sentiment, but I can't. I am not sure but we thought more of the number of words than we did of the sentiment—and this was practical. Engraving on stone costs so much a letter and besides only a certain number of words would look well; and so cost and appearance ruled our choice as they do most choices in this life. Who shall say, however, that in bending to necessity as we did, we selected a poor motto? Certainly not this member of the stone committee. We of '80, believed it a good motto when we adopted it; two years later when a little older we graduated, we realized it was a better motto than we had supposed, and now twenty-one years since we chose it, I doubt if there is a man or woman of us who would change it for any motto ever graven on stone. It is the simplest expression for a fact which life enforces every day that we wrestle with her—your Hope is within. What you are is what you will to be.

IDA M. TARBELELL.
In a congested alleyway
He had his habitation;
A soiled and arabesque effect,
The heir apparent of neglect
And frayed dilapidation.

His cuticle was stratified
By alternate gradations:
Bituminous and anthracite,
(Imagine the savant’s delight
In cosmic calculations).

His hair—originally white,
Was through perversion’s malice
Distinguished by the hues we see
So carelessly diffuse in the Aurora Borealis.

Not in the prism’d splendor of
These nebulous pilasters,
But in the faded ghosts of tints
Which Vandal Time so dimly hints
In one of the old Masters.

His eyes! It seemed that each to each
Maintained a strong objection;
For one appeared to look without,
And one turned inwardly; no doubt
In moral introspection.

His mouth, if sad or humorous,
Evaded all solution;
And seemed a sketch begun with zest,
And then concluded as a jest,
In hurried execution.

That his attire betrayed the care
Of kindly hands and tender,
Was an illusion soon dispelled.
(The upper to the nether held
By one absurd suspender.)

I’d watched him daily from a high
Rear window’s safe removal;
And he in turn regarded me
With a depressing scrutiny
Of placid disapproval.

Perhaps the social features of
This palpable hiatus
Affected him; maybe he knew
I waited there with spirits blue
For the Divine afflatus.
Which may explain to some extent
His disrespectful capers;
(A deprecating style of fun
Designed to show disdain for one
Who scribbled for the papers).

Consistent Critic! he assumed
My point of view to shatter,
And minimize my point and pith
Without a due acquaintance with
The erring subject matter.

Howbeit, on the rearward fence
He'd walk with balance antic,
And jeopardize his limbs and neck
Until I grew a nervous wreck,
And very nearly frantic.

So when we studded nails along
To check his wild gyrations,
From every point he hung to view
Disreputable rags, which blew
In ugly undulations.

Or else, as if he had surmised
My partisan connection,
He'd line the fence, by way of joke,
With flaming posters, which bespoke
Some cherished foe's election.

The yard appeared to be to this
Unconscionable fellow
A dumping ground, till all the back
Was picturesque with bric-a-brac
Worn to the sere and yellow.

A list of the enormities
Would make a saint splenetic,
Suffice it that from cup and can
The gamut up to hoopskirts ran
(With fullness parenthetic).

Until endurance ravelled thin,
To threadbare, frayed or thinner,
And I determined to appeal,
In view of my assaulted weal,
To his compunctions inner.

Assuming (fatal premises)
Such strictures inconvenient
Could be astringent to his vim;
(He was the breathing synonym
Of morals lax and lenient).

But Providence is tortuous
In harvesting fruition.
Almost as if he knew my mind
This alley imp said with a kind
Of freakish intuition,

Charged with a stress emphatic which Shall not these records sully:
"Say, Mister Man, I've got some news
That's (blank blank) good fer all of youse, It's worth a quarter, Gully!"

I tossed the coin, which an adept
At prestidigitation
Had never more alertly caught;
(Alas! I wish that I had not Shown such precipitation.)

"We got to move!" (My pulse attained
An exultation speedy.)
And once again my wallet's girth
I loosed to his: "Say, ain't that worth
Another quarter, Peedy?"

"Where to?" I asked, and with a grin
Whose guile was past narration,
He showed me with an air of pride
A larger shanty close beside
His present habitation.
For months an exile by the sea,
I bade adieu to trouble;
Save for the vague, and undefined
Presages, which the restless mind,
Found in its seethe and bubble.

The locks of Neptune had I combed
And felt his sinews mighty
Toss me one moment on the crest
That churned the evanescent breast
Of buoyant Aphrodite.

His briny brawn, his gusty breath,
Had made my spirits rally;
And then, by contrast likely, I
Thought of the dust, the town, and my
Tormentor in the alley,

And wondered who my proxy was
To bear his sly offences—
Just then a missive crude and brief
Came to renew my firm belief
In wierd coincidences.

Enclosed in an official note
Of gruesome explanation,
To the effect that Alley Jim
Had wafted to the shadows dim
Beneath an operation.

"Dere Sur:"

It read, "I've muved fur keeps
But you wont have to gimme
No quarter now; its kingdum kum
I'm goin' to; a long way frum
Yer honer

good bye

Jimmy."

Frederick Palmer was born in Pennsylvania, but has lived in New York State from early childhood. He was educated at the Jamestown (N. Y.) High School and at Allegheny College. For the last five years he has been associated with the New York Press, for nearly two years being the London correspondent of that journal, part of the time serving the "Press" as war correspondent in the Greco-Turkish war in the Spring of 1897. He went to Larissa, the headquarters of the mobilization of the Greek army, five weeks before the outbreak of hostilities. He crossed the frontier, saw Edhem Pasha and his army, and returned in safety to the Greek lines. He was with the picturesque irregulars whose raid into Turkey was the actual beginning of the war. He saw all the important engagements from that time to the final battle of Donoko and the retreat upon Thermopylae. By a thrilling horseback ride he was able to beat all the European and American papers on the fact that the Greek army had retreated from the battlefield of Mati in a murderous panic. It was not until two days later that the other correspondents succeeded in reaching Athens, when they sent long cablegrams fully confirming all that Mr. Palmer had said, and also the most romantic news triumph of modern times. He was the only American correspondent who saw the first seven days' fighting and the panic that followed. In his "Going to War in Greece," he gives the whole history of the war; of the weaknesses and the bright side of the "Army of the Cafe," as he calls the Greeks; of a correspondent's roustabout life in the most topsy-turvy of campaigns, in all making a graphic story told by the only war correspondent who visited both armies in the field and who had the good fortune to see all the battles from the beginning to the end of the struggle.

Mr. Palmer sailed last February from Seattle to the Alaskan gold fields as special correspondent of his paper, arrived safely, passed through the dangerous Chilcoot Pass and on March 2d was at Dyea. Mr. Palmer does his own photographing and his letters to his paper are the most interesting of all the American correspondents now in the land of gold.

Dr. A. B. Hyde.

Though not an alumnus of Allegheny College, Dr. Hyde, who was for many years a teacher here, has been kind enough to allow us to use his picture and to send us the following article:

A Romance of the Border.

Is the age of chivalry indeed gone? Have fair women and brave men died out of our species? Or does a thread of gold still run through the practical, closely woven social texture of our period? A skeleton of a story from our rude but very human frontier shall show if generous gallantry be gone and lofty aspirations be no longer known. Far from the maddening crowd of cities, yet in a very storm-center of local roughness, was a saloon with restaurant as annex, kept by a man whose chief helper, in chief charge of affairs, was his motherless daughter. She was of fair person, alert and graceful, and like Hebe, bright waitress on the Olympian banquets, she was the light and flower of the place.

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
The drear, unfathomed caves of ocean bear."

She had vague longings for a life of which she was having no glimpses; her soul, like a bird that in its cage feels its wings grow and beats against its wires, was restless with hunger for culture, yearning for contact with what she could hardly name, the good, the beautiful, the true. Among the rude guests of the rough place was a young fellow of mixed blood, Indian, Mexican and the like, grown in half barbarism and far from attractive in person and manner. He was strangely drawn towards this girl and she, modestly enough, felt a singular confidence in him. She told him all her mind, her restless longing, her father's stern refusal, her half despair. He took her case to heart. One winter night she closed the place early; his horses were at hand and when the slow morning broke, they had galloped to a station forty miles away and beyond her hard father's hand. She came to school joyous as an angel stepping from a cloud into a very paradise. Beginning with the simplest studies, she turned to whatever her hand found to do. Her flush, ardent energy seemed to be felt in the whole school as a new, full pulse of life. Her escort remembered her with funds and so she fared thrivingly. All unknown to her he came to trouble, perhaps to crime, certainly to state prison. From the prison he managed through the chaplain to send under fictitious names remittances of money, as to which she never knew whence they came. Time passed and he was free. Not long after he was reported killed, perhaps in some fierce brawl and so he vanished from record. Be his evil buried with him! In all his dealings with the girl he had been most chivalrous. He had never dreamed of her as bride—that would have been as if he had chosen some bright, particular star and thought to wed it. He put his heart's one virtue into her welfare and his rude, even reckless nature stands linked to a generous self-forgetting, a quality worthy of Sir Galahad or Bayard.

The girl came to a development above the average in piety, intelligence and bearing. After a full, varied course of study, she entered the teacher's calling and, rising rapidly, she is now superintendent of an important county.

Is not this plain, unvarnished tale marked by all the features of romance? Could it be set at some enchanting distance and get the aid of time's rich perspective; could it fall into the hand of one gifted not merely to place and color airy nothings, but also to shed the glow of life upon things actual and make even small incidents march to lively music, it might prove that chivalry and romance are not choked from modern fields by the rank overgrowth of social and practical verdure. The initial gloom, the fascination, the longing, the sympathy, the midnight ride, the disappearance, the persistence, the bright success, what wealth of elements is here!

A. B. HYDE.
A Fantasy.

Her eyes are as blue as the summer skies,
Her lips like cherries red;
Upon her cheek the rose of June
Its blushing tint has spread.

Her voice is merry as the lark's,
That ushers in the day
With fairy notes which lightly o'er
The waving meadows stray.

Her smiles are like the sunny glow
That bathes the mountain streams;
Like fleeting gleams from Paradise
They linger in my dreams.

If all the world were mine to give
I'd lay it at her feet;
But I have neither fame nor gold,
Yet in my heart, so lone and cold,
Her image fair I fondly hold,
And dream that life is sweet.

Sayertor Resayertus.

We've a fellow here named Sayer,
And I tell you on the square,
    He's a peach.
And when he's out of college,
With his brain awhirl with knowledge,
    He will preach.

The Episcopalian creed,
He decided, was his speed,
Long ago.
So, arrayed in churchly gown,
He will keep some wicked town
    On the go.

You should see the people's joy
When this "dooced cleavah" boy
Begins to sing.
Then with one accord they cry,
"When you warble you're ace high,
The real thing!"

But to put it in a word,
This smooth youngster is a bird,
    He's a beaut!
And there's nothing more to tell
Except to say he has a swell
    Full dress suit.
When he wears it he's a corker,
Puts his rivals on the porker,
    In a dream!
Clad with most painstaking care,
You will see him everywhere,
    Under steam.
And upon the morning after,
He will tell with grating laughter
What he did.
How he left the deuce to pay,
But the other people say,
"Yellow kid."

Oh, my boy, take my advice,
True fame has a higher price,
You are fruit.
If you hanker for applause
You must find some other cause
Than a dress suit!

"I'm very, very sorry,"
Quoth Monty to Chem. I,
"The class cannot recite to-day
For fishing has begun.
I must away and from the deep
Where he concealed doth lay,
Lure forth the festive sucker;
For the suckers bite to-day."

"Let's build a mighty gym,"
One day quoth X to Y,
"And have the youths all exercise
And get some gold thereby."

"The scheme is good," said Y to X,
"We'll do it right away,
No doubt the plan will soon succeed,
For the suckers bite to-day."
Quoth X to Y, as once before,
"More cash we soon shall need.
What say you to a book store,
'Tis well you must concede?"
"Ah, yes, that plan is surely great,
We'll start without delay.
The dollars will come rolling in,
For the suckers bite to-day."

From every corner of the land,
The teachers come this way,
To take the course prepared for them,
A Normal Course, they say,
'Tis when we see them coming in,
In strong and full array,
That the student old does clearly see
"That the suckers bite to-day."

To An Old Sweetheart.

The June day stretches toward its close,
The elm a lengthened shadow throws.
Across the dusky meadow land,
A youth and maiden, hand in hand,
Are wandering some far sweet way
That lover's feet alone can stray.

It mindeth me of days gone by,
When we were children, you and I,
When, far from worldly cares apart,
You ruled a queen within my heart;
And life was joy, and joy to me
Was paying homage unto thee.

Do you remember, sweetheart mine,
The joys of that brief summer time?
Do you recall the first bright glow
That lit our love fire long ago;
And all the castles, grand and fair,
We builded in the summer air?

To-night it all comes back to me
Through dusky aisles of memory;
The fire that on love's altar burned,
The passions, long to ashes turned.
I rake the smouldering embers o'er
And warm me as in days of yore.

But darkness gathers fast around,
Ere long the curfew bell will sound.
I cover o'er my altar fires,
My boyish passions and desires,
And in the dying ember's glow
Steal back from days of long ago.
Here's to the man in gray,
The herald of joy or of grief?
Whose coming with sorrow is fraught,
Or from sadness brings blessed relief.

Here's to the man in gray,
The type through the ages held dear!
How the heart with expectancy thrills,
As Jake with mail bag draws near.

So here's to our Jake in gray!
When his brow with death's presence is damp,
May his soul to the regions of bliss,
Have a special delivery stamp.

The Tale of a Hulings Hall Table.

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I stood there weak and weary,
Pondering o'er the many feasts my aching back had held of yore,
Till my back was bent near double, with my age and all my trouble.
And I felt the slightest bubble'd push me down upon the floor.
Straight and strong as in my childhood, in the happy days of yore, Alas! I would be nevermore.

Suddenly I had a feeling that some one was softly stealing,
Softly stealing down the darkened stairs outside the door,
Lo, a group of ghosts elated, glided in as illustrated,
Skull and cross-bones animated, from the dark Plutonian shore.
Skull and cross-bones doomed to wander from their gloomy, native shore.
Here on earth for evermore.

Then upon me undefended, quick they rushed with ill intended,
All the bent and sunken boards from off my back in glee they tore.
To some secret place consigned them, where no mortal power could find them,
Left me standing there behind them, shadow of myself before;
Round my festal board the maidens, maidens dainty as of yore, Will assemble nevermore.
Arbutus.

First smile of God to tell of spring's approach,
    Thou comest after winter's sullen reign,
And bid'st the doubting heart of Mother Earth
    To hope again.

A child thou art of shadow and of light,
    The barren hillsides welcome thee to stray;
The robins sing to thee from leafless dells
    Their roundelay.

The evening sun thy petals oft has kissed;
    The whispering breeze has oft made love to thee;
Aurora oft had smiled thy sleep to wake
    On dewy lea.

Though mean and lowly is thy resting place,
    The barren soil, the home of vagrant mole,
Through thee a clod which useless lay, at last
    Has found a soul.

I read within thy heart, O dainty flower,
    The message which thy dreaming life doth show,
That naught within this universe exists,
    Or high, or low,

But may at last attain to perfectness;
    The flowers, the trees, the grass upon the sod,
Are but the strivings of the common clay
    To reach its God.

Another Owliad.

An owl in solemn silence sat,
    And sagely mused on this and that,
With eyes, like two big saucers round,
    Intently fixed upon the ground.
His thoughts were of a hunter bold,
    Who oft times through the forest strolled
In search of him who, in the tree,
    Sat winking, blinking, thoughtfully.
He winked, and winking softly sighed;
    He blinked, and blinking he espied
A cautious form, with stealthy tread
    Approaching, and he hoarsely said,
"Who-o-o? Who-o-o? O, who, sir, who are you-u-u?"

The hunter bold thus made reply:
"I am thy mortal enemy!
    Thy pesky voice I long have heard,
Thou vilely unrelenting bird!
    I'm pestered with thy ceaseless hoot!"
He raised his gun, resolved to shoot,
    When, lo! as fade the beams of day,
That owl, he hied himself away.

A Poem to Fall.

By a Freshman.

Oil, now the festive weiner-wurst
    Comes steaming from the can,
No longer on the street is seen
    The hokey-pokeley man.
The chestnut venders on the street
    Their wares begin to bawl.
By all these signs and many more
    I know that it is Fall.
An Hour with Dr. Perrin.

At our last meeting we were just ready to take up the question of bimetallism when the bell rang. We heard a good deal in this campaign about the crime of '73. Now, as a matter of fact, it wasn't a crime at all. You look in the files of the Congressional Globe in the college library and you will find that the consideration of this bill takes up 9,847.641 pages; as a simple matter of history thirteen copies of that bill were placed on the desk of each and every member of that Congress.

Humes—"A question, Doctor, please? In the report of the Secretary of the Treasury——"

Dr. Perrin—"Now, Humes, I know what you're coming to—I won't discuss that point with you. I haven't looked up the statistics—some day I will and then I'll answer you. Now no one knows what I think about it. You are entitled to your opinion and I to mine. That's a good thought in reference to the point Breed has made. Now, that article is worth reading, you don't have to accept all the author says. Now I don't want to be misquoted. I am only giving you what he says. Now did I say that's my own opinion?"

"Now, how many have finished the book? Hands! We must hurry through it. Yes, before I forget it I want to mention a book just out. It is published by Ginn & Co. I read it through last night after I came home from Mary Lease's lecture, didn't finish it till 3 o'clock. Students have no business to neglect their health. They ought to have eight hours sleep. I tried it once myself."

"Colter, are you ready with your report?"

Colter—"No, sir, why I thought you said you wouldn't have time to call for it to-day."

Dr. Perrin—"All right, just as you please about it."

"Prindle, how about you? Oh, yes, you have given yours. I remember it very distinctly now."

"McClosky, where's Harper to-day? Is there a football game?"

"Does any one know where Soult is?"

"Now we will listen to Bower's report. Come up where we can see you, Bower. (Bower reads report). That's a good, clear statement, Bower."

"Now I have the greatest respect in the world for Henry George personally, but I haven't the least particle for his doctrine. It is a significant fact (smiling toward the class) that the industrial center of the United States has moved from Mifflintown, Pa., in 1880, to several miles east of Canton, in 1890. We hear a good deal now about Quay (looking at Weyand). He just missed being a great statesman by being a great politician."

"Knapp, did Napoleon live 347 or 374 B.C."

Knapp—"347."

Perrin—"Now wasn't it in the 6th Century A.D.? We'll pass that point; that isn't in the lesson any way. Now you don't have to accept everything I say, what I want you to do is to think through an epoch and an event for yourselves;"

"Did you ever hear of Simon Newcomb? He is the mathematician who helps to get out Ayer's Sarsaparilla almanac. You ought to get one, in cloth 35 cents, expressage about 3 cents more. One of the students, Mr. Swaney, I believe, attended to the ordering last year. I always keep the back numbers on file. Prof. Von Holst used to tell us that next to knowing a thing was to know where to find it. I think there is a copy in the city library. Prof. Gilman's book on Profit Sharing is well worth the price of admission. I read an article in this morning's paper on the banks being in the governing business. It's all foolishness to say we could get along without banks. You don't know and never will know how I am going to vote. I believe in the system of laissez faire. It might be well to look up that point.

"Economics is closely related to history, in fact all the natural sciences are founded on history. To understand modern political economy we must be able to trace the genealogy of the royal families of Europe. Joanna, the Insane, married Philip, the Handsome. Of this union were born Frederick Barbarossa, August Compte and Henry C. Adams. One of these married Catherine, of Aragon; another married Mary Tudor and the last married Lucretia Borgia. All six perished along with King John and King Arthur, who were trying to reconcile Nominalism and Realism on the Field of the Cloth of Gold.

"Then it's well to know about Stephen de Blois, William Rufus and Leon Beaulieu. A friend of mine has recently written a book on Napoleon. Napoleon was thoroughly bad. He went all over Europe doing all the damage he possibly could."

Walker asks a question.

"Now Walker, that's nothing more or less than quibbling. If you want to know, stay after class. I don't care to take up their time in that way.

"Now, I don't suppose you will have any time to read during vacation, but if you do, I would like to recommend History of Our Own Times, by Justin McCarthy; VonRanke's History of the Popes, J. B. Clark's Philosophy of Wealth, Francis A. Walker's Political Economy, Carroll D. Wright's Industrial Evolution and Sir Henry Maine's Village Communities.

"Some one spoke about the Holy Roman Empire. What a misnomer; it was unholy, un-Roman and unimperial. It was --- (Bell rings. The Doctor looks at his watch.) --- "I don't know what's the matter with that janitor's watch. We'll take the first twenty pages for to-morrow. I believe the lesson to-day extended to the bottom of page thirty, to the subject 'Wealth,'—you are excused."
The sciences grew to such a place in our school
That courses were changed against every rule,
And every girl and young man too,
Worked in Biology the whole day through.
They were all proud of him, worked for him, slaved for him,
Till one day their idol fell in a trice,
For slang is the passion of E. L.
After a long quiz, though the questions were few,
When the professor had written all the big names he knew,
And every girl and young man too,
Worked on Biology the whole day through,
Imagine their feelings, when he said of his class,
They each one resembled a "consummate ass."

Miss Spalding’s Introduction to Us.

ALICE H. SPALDING.

Cumnock School of Oratory, Northwestern University, gained her this important position. The news of election came to her as a surprise, as she did not know she was under consideration for the appointment. Her acceptance of the instructorship at Allegheny University is not a surprise to her friends. Miss Spalding lives at 1534 Orrington Avenue, and is only 20 years of age.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Cumnock's Brightest Pupil Called to an Important Eastern College.

Miss Alice Huntington Spalding, a Northwestern graduate, has been elected instructor of elocution and delsarte at Allegheny College. She has accepted the unexpected offer and will leave
The Bills.

(With profoundest apologies to Poe.)

Hear the Prof. who teaches Greek—whiskers red!
What a world of information he holds within his head!
How he looks, looks, looks on students all afright,
As no fault he overlooks, but puts to them the hooks
With a devilish delight.

How they hear, hear, hear, with an everlistening ear
The gruntunfabulations which from his lips distill,
From this Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill,
The old familiar grunt of this omnipresent Bill.

Hear the other, greater Bill—stem your mirth—
With his hand upon the rudder of the earth.
Though the winds disturb the air, with him they can't compare:
For when he, all inflated, makes a speech,
Then the winds, all agitated, can never this William, in his own mind elevated, overreach.

Oh! When out for cash he goes,
Many give it to him, with a smile, to gain repose,
For each one knows how he blows!

Oh! The future! When we think of the Bishop's seat we wink,
At the hopes and aspirations of this Bill, Bill, Bill,
Of this Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill, Bill,
Who rules the goings and the comings on the hill.

Lives of great men oft remind us,
That it is no use to cram;
For the things that we have crammed on
Are not asked us in exam.

12th. Prop's are examined in spelling. Wonderful disclosures!
15th. Dr. Crawford fires the first gun in the war against the persons who pencil mark the walls. (Pneumatic gun.)
20th. Greeks banquet at the Kepler. H. H. girls know frat. yells.
21st. Lieut. Miller departs for Chickamauga.
25th. Senior-Sophomore banquet. Freshmen weak as water.
29th. H. F. Davis finds himself the possessor of $2.12 worth of experience.

"The very pink of perfection." —Lowstuter.
"Thou living ray of intellectual fire." —Colter.
"There is mischief in this man." —Barnette.

May.

5th. Glee Club concert. Club exhausts its entire repertoire to satisfy the demands of an enthusiastic audience.
10th. Dr. Perrin asks questions for an entire period.
13th. Flag floats over gymnasium.
13th. Glee Club goes to Jefferson, and according to Dr. Crawford "disgraces the college." (See page 87.)
14th. Allegheny-Waynesburg, 9 to 7.
16th. Fijis give dancing party.
17th. Secrist gets a new hat.
20th. Fijis get thirty days.

Near the end of March, in Flint, Michigan, was witnessed this spectacle:
A rickety old carryall wagon, drawn by a rickety old mule, with pump-handle ears flopping up and down, like the wings of an enormous butterfly, and driven by a rickety old man; in the carryall a large three-sided transparency, with a large portrait of Dr. Crawford on each of its three sides, and the words, "Lecture on Savonarola to-night."

Borland should take the hint dropped by Miss Confer at the twilight recital when she rendered for the ninth time, Riley's masterpiece, "That old sweetheart of mine." The scheme has always worked like a charm heretofore.*

Byers, after exam, in Math. I.—"We have met Gen'l Dutton at Mathematics Court House and surrendered conditionally."

Stratton says that when the Freshman girls grabbed him the night of the Senior-Sophomore banquet he kissed one of them. Which one?

* A choice collection of joie d’âge, with Miss Confer as the central figure, had been prepared for this department, but in view of the side talks with her, which have been so instructive and attractive a feature of the current volume of the Campus, we have left them out, not caring to incur a charge of plagiarism.
As They Really Are.

Dr. Monty.—"The grand old man."
Prof. Bill.—No man ever lived who had a kinder heart.
Dr. Crawford.—A great hustler and orator.
Dr. Rice.—A distinguished son of a distinguished father.
Dr. Tommy.—The most original conversationalist in the world.
Prof. Morey.—"One of nature's noblemen."
Dr. Perrin.—A thorough historian and a gentleman.
Prof. Ross.—The professor who is never too busy to stay after class to clear up some point for the boys.
Mrs. Laffer.—The one who fills the hardest position in the college, with the most consummate tact.
Miss Mann.—Often misquoted and misunderstood, but a careful, conscientious and thorough teacher.

Our Prophets.

"And the prophets shall become wind and the word is not in them."—Jeremiah v. 13.
Prof. Bill on how the Greeks would lick the Turks.
Miss Mann on who would be elected Judge:
Dr. Monty and Pres. Crawford on base ball and foot ball games.
"General" Dutton on how Dewey wouldn't fight.

Since when has Tommy grown so vain,
His beauty to enhance,
That, ere he has his picture tak,
He wants to press his pants.

Proposed Rules.

Callers at the Hall will be required to present a certificate of character from Sunday school teacher.
Any male student desiring to take a young lady to church must present a written request to the preceptress at least one week beforehand. A duplicate must be filed at the office.

Form of Request.

I, ________, a bona-fide student in Allegheny College, hereby respectfully request and petition that I be allowed to take ________ to church on Sunday, the ________, I am ________ years old and reside at __________. My church preferences are ________.

Young men must have written permission from their parents and will please enclose the following circular letter:

DEAR SIR:—Your son has requested the privilege of escorting a young lady to church. Our policy is such that we cannot do what he asks without a written request from you. We do not pretend to decide whether or not such a course is justifiable, but think it is not. Therefore, if you wish that your son be allowed to do this while a student in this college, you must assume all responsibility.

Very truly,
THE FACULTY.

P. S.—This is a Christian college.

In making church report, the student must state whether he was with a girl and if not, why.

Requests for Dedication.

The KALDRON board have paid no attention to requests from the Faculty that the book be dedicated to them. Dr. Rice's application was verbose, redundant, tautologous and contained thirteen "so much for that's;" Morey killed his application with kindness; Dr. C. tried to frighten us into doing it; Prof. Ross' argument that he was about to be married was considered irrelevant; we would like to have dedicated it to Tommy but he has flunked too many of the board; Miss Spalding got enough advertising through the Associated Press, (see page 181.) Dr. Perrin's was not considered because the edition dedicated to him two years ago did not sell as well as was expected; Prof. Bill Jonahed the Graeco-Turkish war so abominably in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate that we were afraid to run the risk with the KALDRON. We have returned his application marked K. Ex. Cr. (See Theme-Book Abbreviations). Miss Mann's letter is being translated by the French diplomatic corps at Washington, who report as yet no thought. Emile Zola, when he comes to this country, will work upon it. It is probable she will be flunked. Dutton tried to be funny and then he didn't pay for his cut last year any way.

ARRANGEMENT COMMITTEE.

A Tragedy in Two Acts.

I.—Prof. Dutton before Round Table, April 25.

"The men now in the American Navy are not fighters. Now there is Dewey, commander of the Asiatic squadron. He is a fine gentleman, looks well in kid gloves, white necktie and dress suit. He is smooth and polished in manner. He is a real nice fellow, a gentleman, a dude, but he won't fight—can't fight!"

II.—See paper of May 2.
Can a Kaldron be Published Without Money?
 Possibly one edition but we do not think the next one would meet with success.

Can a Kaldron be Published Without Advertising?
 Yes. How? By each of you paying $3.00 per copy in advance. You paid $1.00 for this book. The advertiser paid the other $2.00. Besides he will generally give you the most liberal discounts. But even if the prices are the same, he deserves your patronage.

The '98 Kaldron's Debts Are All Paid
 but this debt to its advertisers. We ask you all to help pay this debt.
 Consult the index to advertisers on the last page. Familiarize yourself with the names. Just say

"I Saw Your Ad. in the Kaldron"
 And help the next business manager.

Hulings Hall Kindergarten

FOUNDED IN 1893.

Parents desiring a reliable kindergarten and home-like nursery for their little girls will find Hulings Hall unsurpassed. This hall is in charge of a competent Head Nurse who devotes her whole time to the children. In addition to the Head Nurse there is a valuable assistant who fully realizes the importance of her position. The poorly nourished, scrawny babies placed in our care are soon transformed into happy, healthy children, thanks to a continuous diet of Mellin’s Food and our original method of discipline.

THERE ARE NO RULES . . . BUT

No. 1.—The little girls are never allowed to play with the little boys.
No. 2.—They must be in bed five minutes after sundown.
No. 3.—They are supposed to say their prayers before retiring. (This is a Methodist institution but not denominational.)
No. 4.—Dancing ‘round the May-pole, rolling hoop and all such sinful pleasures strictly prohibited.
No. 5.—At the father’s request permission will be given to attend the circus, providing it is Barnum & Bailey’s. We feel safe in granting this, as Meadville is a small place and Barnum & Bailey do not visit more than once in two or three years.
No. 6.—No lying countenanced, but a little deceit is not prohibited.

Western University of Pennsylvania.

The Western University of Pennsylvania is the oldest institution of learning established by law in the valley of the Mississippi, north of Tennessee. It is, with one exception, the most numerously attended institution of learning in the State of Pennsylvania. The faculty numbers nearly one hundred professors and instructors, and there are about eight hundred students. The University has a great deal to offer in art, literature, and scientific culture, and for the deeply religious character of its people. Its vast libraries, the Carnegie Museum which is under the care of the Chancellor of the University, the art galleries, and the magnificent opportunities for technical instruction which its great industries offer, make it an ideal place for the student who seeks information and desires that polish which comes from acquaintance with the life of a great metropolitan center.

The Departments of the University are as follows:

I. THE COLLEGE.

II. THE ENGINEERING SCHOOL.

III. THE DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY.

IV. THE ALLEGHENY OBSERVATORY.

V. THE PITTSBURG LAW SCHOOL.

VI. THE WEST PENN MEDICAL COLLEGE.

VII. THE PITTSBURG COLLEGE OF PHARMACY.

VIII. THE RENENAN MOTHER'S HOSPITAL.

BEST ON EARTH
For Chapped, Cracked and Rough Hands and Face; Cuts, Burns, Blisters, Bruises, Scalds, Eruptions, Sores; Sore Lips, Mouth, Throat; Cold, Blisters and Sores, Catarrh, Ulcers, Boils, Galls, Chafes, Piles, Warts, Corns; Sore, Scabby and Scald Head; Dandruff, Callous Feet and Hands, Ills and Injuries of Bees and Insects, Tetter, Salt Rheum and all common Skin Diseases.

TO KEEP THE HANDS, FACE
And Skin soft and smooth, and to remove Tan and Sunburn, rub on thoroughly a small quantity of Ma-le-na while they are wet, after washing or bathing, then wipe dry with a towel as usual. The effect will be very satisfactory and agreeable, simply marvelous, without any unpleasant or greasy sensation.

AFTER THE BATH,
Rub a small quantity of Ma-le-na all over your body, keeping the skin wet while rubbing, then wipe dry as usual, and you will be delightfully refreshed and enjoy a soft, velvety skin in place of the harsh, rough, scratchy sensations so common after the bath.

AFTER A SHAVE,
Every gentleman should rub a small quantity of Ma-le-na on his face, keeping it wet with cool or cold water, as the Ma-le-na used in this way is very refreshing, acts as a tonic to the skin and will keep the face from smarting and getting red and rough.

Millions of people use Ma-le-na. Those who use it most praise it most. Try a box and you will praise it, too. No risk, as it is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. Full directions in a beautiful Ma-le-na book, with every box.

Price, only 10 cents. Sold by druggists and dealers, or sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of the price, 10 cents, in silver or stamps.

CONNEAUT LAKE.
On the P. B. & L. E. R., is the largest and most picturesque sheet of water in the State. The center of attraction during summer months.

SLIPPERY ROCK PARK
Is also a beautiful picnic ground. Nature has done much to make it a specially attractive spot. It is divided by ravines, and Slippery Rock Creek affords ample facilities for boating and fishing.

The New Cambridge.

The above engraving represents the new structure now completed and opened on the ground formerly occupied by the Cambridge House, burned April 1, 1897. Messrs. Haggerty and White, the proprietors, have planned a house in the main but two stories high, with spacious front and rear court. On the first floor are the main office, parlor, dining room, public bath rooms and kitchen. Commercial sample rooms in basement, also billiard room and bowling alley. The second floor is used entirely for sleeping rooms, including suites with baths, etc., every room being an outside one. This is a delightful resort for those in search of health or recreation, every facility being furnished for comfort of guests. Free bus to all trains and mineral springs. Rates on application.

Photogelatine Printing.

These processes give the finest results now known for illustrative work. For illustrations for COLLEGE PUBLICATIONS the photogelatine process is especially desirable, as in small editions it is not only the best but also the cheapest. Specimens and prices will be sent to those who care to enquire into the matter.

The portrait of President McKinley, in this book, is by the photogravure process, while the portraits of the Senior class are done by the photogelatine process.
